Council rejects rebates to women

Equal opportunity parking tickets

By ROBERT MISKIMON

WOMEN MAY be the victims of discrimination on the job, but when it comes to parking tickets in Carmel, they're strictly equal with men.

Carmel City Council members decided 3-2 Tuesday against a proposal by outgoing Councilman Howard Brunn to rebate 41 percent of parking fines to women drivers.

Brunn said the resolution, drafted by Carmel attorney and women's rights advocate Riane Eisler, was intended as a "symbolic" gesture of support for the Equal Rights Amendment.

The resolution notes that "American working women are paid only 59 percent as much as men" and should therefore be entitled to a refund of 41 percent of any parking fines they receive in Carmel.

City Administrator Doug Peterson advised the council the proposal "would be administratively cumbersome and difficult to carry out." And it would raise questions of "reverse discrimination" against men, Peterson added.

"I would have to request an opinion from the city attorney that this would not be an illegal gift of public funds," Peterson said.

Ms. Eisler, an expert on Constitutional law, said the intent of the resolution is similar to that of discounts for senior citizens.

"There was a lot of opposition a few years ago when the idea was proposed to give special consideration to the elderly," Ms. Eisler said. "The single poorest segment of American society is women over the age of

Would vote for Norberg

Dear Editor:

If I could vote for Gunnar Norberg, I would. After many years of living in Carmel, I now live in Carmel Knolls which is on the fringe and out of the voting area.

Gunnar Norberg has fought tooth and nail to keep the unique village character of Carmel. It is very fragile and could be lost in a short time to business greed. If that were to happen it would be a deterrent to desirable tourism — and a disaster to residents who chose Carmel for its present quality.

Important! — Gunnar Norberg has a working background of one year as mayor, three as a city councilman. He has the best ability to cope with problems that will need solving in the near future.

True, he had surgery this past year. But he now looks and feels better than he has in years. I'd vote for him.

Don't change horses

Dear Editor:

On April 13 the Carmel electorate will again have the chance to vote for Barney Laiolo as mayor.

The city will face, in the next two years of the mayor's term, many important, crucial and complex issues, such as the parking agreement with the Library and the Pine Inn, the housing for the elderly, the recreation program, etc., which will affect the future of Carmel for many years to come.

The issues will require the commitment of a person of Mayor Laiolo's qualifications, experience and background knowledge. Continuity is of major importance in examining these issues and in taking an active role in negotiations which are necessary to bring them to a successful conclusion.

Voters of Carmel, do not change horses in mid-stream! Re-elect Mayor Barney Laiolo, an old work horse, with a proven and unexcelled track record.

It's not about commas

Dear Editor:

Fun's fun, but electing a mayor for the city of Carmel is not about commas. It is about experience, efficiency, conciliation. It is about a long-time resident of Carmel who knows the issues and is willing to keep an open mind when working for their solution. It is about Charlotte Townsend for mayor!

Purchase post office?

Dear Editor:

A simple solution may exist in relation to the future whereabouts of the local center of community life, the Post Office. Leave it where it is. While the owners may decline to renew the lease, a city council so dedicated to preserving the Carmel way of life probably has within its powers the chance to keep it in its present location by exercising the right of eminent domain and buying the building and land from the present owners at a fair and appropriate price.

Certainly a goodly share of the purchase price could be gotten by selling the "park" land on Dolores that just sits there without much real reason for its being. And if the city coffers won't cough up the remainder of any purchase price, in the interest of preserving this vital community function in its present and convenient location, a simple bond election would probably pass without much fuss.

There you are. Keep the Post Office, get rid of a ridiculous "park" surrounded by commercial ventures — a park that has no function of a significant nature at best — and keep a Carmel institution where it is really needed.

Stephenson for council

Dear Editor:

Robert Stephenson is my choice for Carmel City Council. During his six years (three as chairman) on the Carmel Planning Commission, Stephenson has proven to be an intelligent and capable man who knows the issues and effectively handles them. We need that experience on the council.

Stephenson studies each problem, actively listens to all viewpoints, and then makes sensible decisions which achieve positive results for the community. We need that quality of logical and open-minded problem solving which Stephenson will bring to the city council.

Stephenson has consistently shown the unique ability to work with others no matter what their personalities or attitudes. He concentrates on the issues. He does not let his emotions, or those of others, distract from achieving solutions. We need his singleness of purpose on the Carmel City Council.

I respect Robert Stephenson as a man, as a Planning Commissioner, and as a person who will continue to use all his talent and energy to solve the problems our community faces. On April 13 my vote for Carmel City Council will be for Robert Stephenson.

Laiolo has courage

Dear Editor:

Mayor Barney Laiolo deserves the vote of confidence of the Carmel voters at the April 13th City Election. Mayor Laiolo has served the city with distinction, dedication and competence. Mayor Laiolo knows the city well, having lived here for nearly 40 years and having established an outstanding record of service as a Planning Commissioner, City Councilman and mayor.

Mayor Laiolo has the courage of his convictions. He has always stood, sometimes alone, for what he knows is best for Carmel. Mayor Laiolo understands the needs of the citizens of Carmel. He listens to his constituents and takes into account their points of view prior to making his fair and well reasoned decisions.

The city is fortunate that Mayor Laiolo decided once again to throw his hat into the ring. Carmelites must take advantage of this unique opportunity by re-electing Barney Laiolo as Mayor.

Thanks to sanitary crews

Dear Editor:

Have you ever had effluent (sewage) fill your entire bathroom, and overflow further into your house? Not your effluent, but all of your neighbors'? For many, many years I have. It is too repulsive to describe!

What is needed is a new, efficient system to replace the antiquated one along DelMar. This is well known.

The Carmel Sanitary District installed a partial solution to this problem a few years ago. It keeps the "business" out of my house, but is only a stopgap — sometimes unhealthy and questionably legal.

For all of the publicity about sewage into the bay, how about sewage onto Carmel Beach? At least it fertilizes the iceplant and accacia, even perfumes the air!

My thanks to all the crews who come rain or shine, day or night, when things break down. They do their best to keep the works going.

Thoughts on the election

Dear Editor:

I don't get about as much these days so I have been reading the articles in the Pine Cone and my friends have told me in some detail about the council meetings and the town hall meetings. With the election just a few days away I have come to some conclusions.

In the councilmen area this is what I think. Mr. Maradei seems to have a real true feeling for the welfare of Carmel. He is also on the Forestry Commission which gives him a good idea about how government in Carmel runs. Mike Brown has very good experience. I think he has worked very hard for the betterment of the whole community.

In the mayor department, the decision wasn't very difficult. From what I've read Barney Laiolo hasn't done much but blow his top and friends tell me at the town meetings he never answered a question.

Mrs. Townsend also has trouble giving an actual answer to a question. Always talked about mediating. What she was going to mediate was never clarified. I am told that until recently she has not attended any council meetings in a good number of years. On the other hand, Gunnar Norberg has so much experience and has done so much for Carmel during the years it would be fortunate for all of us if we could have him at the helm again. I think it is possible several of the council people feel the same.

No 'retread mayors'

Dear Editor:

One candidate for mayor of Carmel-by-the-Sea has had a little-publicized career on the Carmel Sanitary Board and as its chairman.

A sticky situation, to say the least, has existed for years between the Carmel board and the Pebble Beach board, created at a time when no mayor of Carmel cried out against a sweetheart agreement greatly to Carmel's disadvantage.

One person, Charlotte Townsend, now candidate for mayor, has gracefully resolved most of these problems, quietly and purposefully pursuing this end.

Also as more youthful than the elderly gentlemen who seek to be retread mayors, Charlotte Townsend brings an astuteness in chairing meetings which will encourage public participation and even encourage others to come forth and enter Carmel's political arena.

Charlotte Townsend has so much to offer; and we have had adequate samples of what has been offered by previous mayors.

Whoever else is elected, she can bring us together tactfully and by intelligent direction solve the many problems of personality and direction.

Like a 'beached whale'

Dear Editor:

The county library system reminds one of a beached whale. It's costing $1,500,000 a year to keep it alive, but the major service is being provided by several city libraries for a contracted total of $338,000, a bargain in anyone's eyes.

The county now wants to lower its contract costs considerably, forcing city libraries to have to cut off service to county residents.

To get the whale off the beach and happily swimming again, the county proposes a ten-year plan to build five county branch libraries — something that should have been done long, long ago when there was a money supply — at a projected cost of $5,6400,000 (no inflation factor built in). These facilities would, of course, have to be staffed.

The county, with a hiring freeze, and facing a $6,500,000 deficit in fiscal year 1983 alone, is in no position to effect this admirable, but poorly timed project. I fear that county residents, unless they insist on preserving their right to use city libraries, will find themselves, after June 20, stuck with even less adequate library service than they have had in the past.

County residents will be the losers as the poor whale is hacked up and carted off for other uses.

Favors nuclear disarmament

Dear Editor:

President Reagan is vastly stockpiling nuclear weapons. Our hard-earned tax dollars support this atomic buildup. On our tax form, we declare that our returns are true, correct and complete. In turn, shouldn't we, the taxpayers, have every right to expect our elected officials to be honest and truthful with us?

Yet, there is serious doubt whether Reagan's people are telling us the truth about their nuclear strategy. One claims nuclear war is winnable and advocates additional measures to protect selected civilians. Another contemplates a limited response, and still another rejects the other two. In short, this administration distorts and muddles the nuclear issue. This is nothing new. During bomb tests, President Eisenhower is quoted as saying, "keep the public confused about fission and fusion."

This life-and-death issue is too grave to be left entirely to politicians. Many well-informed experts, including respected physicians, tell us nuclear war is unwinnable; that it would be sheer mass suicide. More and more citizens must speak out and tell Washington no more double-talk. The days of deception are over.

Once we face the truth in an honest and forthright manner, we're in a position to show the Russians that their interests as well are served by nuclear disarmament. If humanity is to survive, we must overcome this atomic madness.

Above all, American taxpayers can do much to force our shilly-shallying politicians to tell us the truth, our survival depends on it.

In support of Bruno's

Dear Editor:

During the weeks following my Feb. 4 letter in support of Bruno's Market, it has become increasingly interesting to follow the progression of letters appearing weekly on the subject. It seems that our Pine Cone has once again provided a sounding board for the various opinions concerning a subject. Personally, my experience has been quite interesting.

After my letter first appeared I was pleased to have received many positive reactions. Numerous people agreed that they too wanted to shop once again at Bruno's. There was, however, one rather cowardly negative response. A few days after the paper was out I received in my Post Office box an unidentified envelope. My name and address, cut from the paper, was taped to the outside. Enclosed was a solitary card reading "Have a nice day . . .-------." I am sorry that the sender did not have the courage to identify himself, as I would have been interested in knowing why he had that particular reaction to my expressing an opinion.

One week after the letter, a rebuttal of sorts was submitted by the right Rev. Faia of Freedom. In it he stated several fallacies. Number one was that I was a resident of Carmel for only a short period of time. I have lived in this area off and on for the past 20 years, most of my life. Pray tell, how long has he lived in Carmel? Number two — he stated that I had never stopped shopping at Bruno's during the strike. For a period of over one week I did stay away, after which time I made my decision to cross the lines, one I have yet to regret. Rev. Faia also stated that he was walking the lines in support of his many friends, but failed to mention that he is a union representative and walking is part of his duties therein.

I read with great interest the letters proclaiming the virtues of "Judy & Co." I, because I stated my rightful opinion, have been called names, been ridiculed, harrassed, taunted and made fun of. There have been threats made in my presence and on one occassion the police were summoned. When Dean Schumacher posted my letter on the door, obscenities and defaming remarks were written over it.

On the other hand, I have, as usual, received nothing but the utmost in service and courtesy from Dean and his staff. Despite the ridiculous actions outside, Bruno's is still a great store. Consider the courage needed to keep Bruno's open. I commend "Dean & Co." on their efforts and perserverance.

The situation has gone far beyond being rational. Isn't it about time it ended? My suggestion would be that the pickets gather what pride they have left and move on. I think many people would agree that Carmel has had enough of the picket line at Bruno's. It is sad to think that the same people I once considered to be friends can stoop to such actions.

Since my first letter, many people have returned in support of Bruno's and many unsolicited letters of support have appeared in the Pine Cone. There is a spirit of survival at Bruno's, a spirit borne of truth and based in fact. Let's support that spirit! I also join with the people of Carmel and the supporters of Bruno's in congratulating Dean and Susan on the birth of their beautiful son, William Dean Schumacher. May he be blessed with the same strength of character and spirit of his parents.

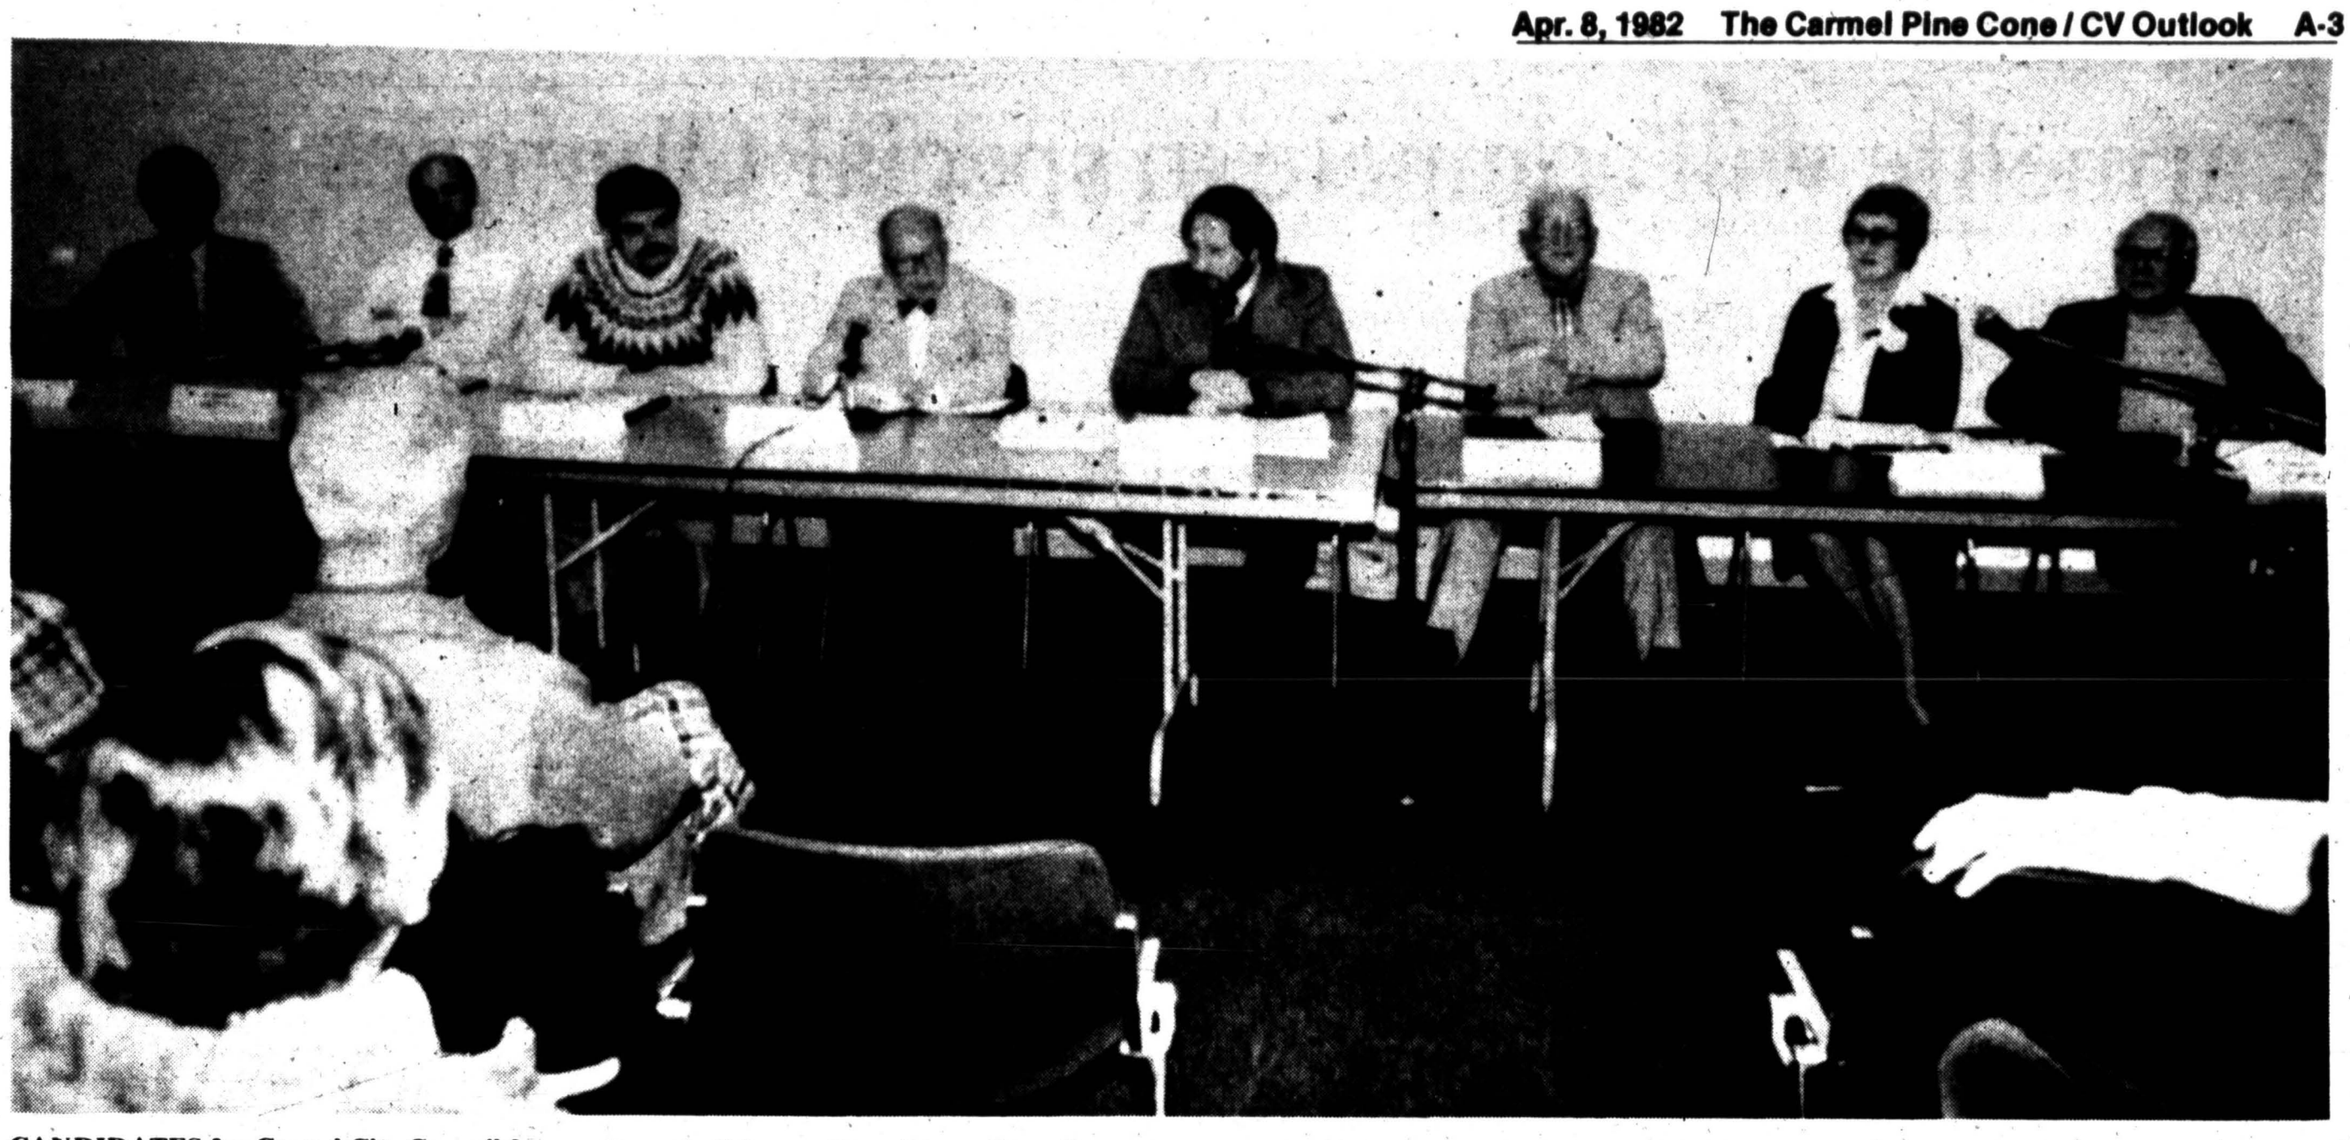
DON'T FORGET TO VOTE APRIL 13!



CANDIDATES for Carmel City Council faced the public in a forum sponsored by the Carmel Citizens Committee. Council candidates include (from left): Larry Little, Robert Pettit, Mike Brown, Robert Stephenson, David Maradei; mayoral candidates Barney Laiolo, Charlotte Townsend, and Gunnar Norberg.

Carmel voters will select mayor and two council members on April 13

By ROBERT MISKIMON

RESOLUTION of the longstanding conflict between business and residential interests weighed heavily on the minds of citizens and candidates for Carmel City Council in a public forum at Sunset Center.

The candidates' night was presented March 30 by the Carmel Citizens Committee. About 125 persons braved heavy rains and high winds to listen to the candidates and to ask questions.

Candidates for two, four-year seats on the council are incumbent Mike Brown, Larry Little, Dr. C. Robert Pettit, David Maradei, Robert Stephenson, and Robert Calais — who did not attend the forum.

There are three candidates for the two-year mayoral term: incumbent Barney Laiolo, Gunnar Norberg, and Charlotte Townsend.

"They've accused me of not liking women," Laiolo said. "in the last two years I've appointed eight women and six men to city commissions."

There are 3,779 citizens registered to vote in the April 13 municipal election. Polls in Carmel will be open from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m.

Candidates were asked what could be done to promote "positive business growth" harmonious with the residential community in Carmel.

"Businesses are here," said mayoral candidate Gunnar Norberg. "We can't abolish them. I would create specific zones for neighborhood-related businesses, like barber shops and hardware stores, spot zone it and control the rents.

"I would insure that the landlords could only get meat and potatoes out of it and not dessert and whipped cream."

"We need to switch from tourist-oriented to resident-oriented businesses, where possible," Ms. Townsend said. "I think many of us would prefer to have less city revenues and more resident-oriented businesses."

"All we have left are a few (resident-oriented businesses)," Laiolo said. "I see no way you're going to stop it."

"I think there is a positive business atmosphere in Carmel," Maradei said. "That's why there are so many businesses here. I'm not anti-business; I want to restore a balance between the business and residential communities."

Stephenson said the city should "zone creatively" to encourage more resident-oriented businesses.

"If the city owns the stores, selects the businesses and controls the rents, that would be the only way to do it," Stephenson said.

"What concerns me is the influx of too many tourist-oriented businesses," Brown said. "Carmel once had that special feeling that people who came here felt they had 'discovered' it. I'm afraid we're losing that."

"If every resident got out of his car and walked to the grocery store, we wouldn't have this problem," Pettit said. "My feeling about residentially-oriented businesses is we've got to support them."

"There are kinds of businesses who cater to visitors but who do pay for the services we all use," said Little.

•

CANDIDATES were also asked what — if anything — they believe should be done to "control" the business district in Carmel.

"You can't control the business district," Pettit replied. "I think a thoughtful overview is the most we can do."

"Trying to control free enterprise is contrary to our own best interests," Little said. "It would be a little irregular."

"The idea that you can't monkey around with private enterprise is nonsense," Norberg said. "We're doing it at every level of government all the time. It's not irregular to control it; Carmel is not in desperate need of all this (tax) money that comes in."

"I think there are many of us who would prefer to have less city revenues and more resident-oriented businesses," Ms. Townsend said.

"We must control the business district, and we have for a long time," Stephenson said.

Norberg, a former councilman and mayor, gave his age as 75 and said: "I find myself in excellent health. I recently had quadruple (heart) bypass surgery. It can either cure or kill; in my case it cured."

Norberg said one unfinished piece of business he would like to see completed is the application of "some type of density mechanisms" to regulate the intensity of commercial use within the village.

Ms. Townsend said she is concerned about "feelings of unhappiness and dissention at the city council meetings" which leads to a focus on "personal antagonisms rather than issues.

"Any and all decisions should be held up to the standard of whether it is good for the residents," Ms. Townsend said.

Laiolo said he seeks re-election "to complete some of the things I have in the fire." These include construction of an annex to Harrison Memorial Library with parking facilities, a senior citizen housing project on Dolores Street, a city recreation program for youth and seniors, and resolution of permanent quarters for the Carmel Post Office.

"They've accused me of not liking women," Laiolo said. "In the last two years I've appointed eight women and six men to city commissions."

"The issues are familiar," Maradei said. "Parking, traffic congestion remain very much alive and we really haven't made much progress in solving them. We're a divided city. Both business and residents have claimed the city as their own. Traditional residents think they're losing their community. We're besieged by excessive internal development within our one square mile.

•

"WE'RE EXPERIENCING social problems—crime and vandalism. We're a city whose priorities have not been determined. I would like to be able to change the city from a growth-oriented one to one focused on stability and conservation."

"I'm a doer, not a talker," Brown said. "I've introduced 62 pieces of legislation and I was able to get 82 percent passed. I really believe in the residents' interests being served at city hall."

Pettit proposed "the elimination of all traffic in Carmel during daylight hours except to residents with permits" as a solution to the parking and traffic problems.

"It is not absurd or futuristic," Pettit said. "Such plans have been used in areas like Yosemite. It would improve business and increase residential values."

"The problems of Carmel are those that have been neglected for a long time and are now encroaching upon us," Little said. "My experience as an inn keeper has proven that I can take care of people's problems."

The candidates agreed that the revision of the Carmel general plan — now underway — is a crucial factor to determine the shape of the village for decades to come, and agreed that the Carmel Post Office, faced with a possible loss of its lease at its present location, should remain somewhere in town.

"Businesses are here," said mayoral candidate Gunnar Norberg. "We can't abolish them. I would create specific zones for neighborhood-related businesses, like barber shops and hardware stores, spot zone it and control the rents.

Brown was asked what he thought of Pettit's proposal to ban non-resident cars from Carmel during the day.

"I don't know that legally we can do that," Brown answered. "I don't think the law gives you that latitude. You can't collect gasoline tax revenues and then ban cars from the roads."

The candidates agreed that familiarity with, and use of, Roberts Rules of Order (a parliamentary guide) would be indispensible to service on the council, except Stephenson.

"With the planning commissoin and the city council, I think strict adherence to the rules is not necessary. Good camaraderie is all you need."

Here are thumbnail sketches of the three candidates for the two-year mayor's seat:

• Barney Laiolo, 71, incumbent. Served as member of Carmel Planning Commission 1965-68; elected to four-year term on Carmel City Council in 1968 and appointed mayor in 1968 and 1970. Elected first popularly-chosen mayor of Carmel in 1980. Founder and former owner of Village Electric.

• Charlotte Townsend, 56. Elected to four-year term on the Carmel Sanitary District Board of Directors in 1975 and re-elected in 1979; president of sanitary district 1977-78 and 1981-82; served as trustee of Harrison Memorial Library from 1964 to 1965; vice-president of Carmel Citizens Committee.

• Gunnar Norberg, 75. Served three terms as member of Carmel City Council, from 1958-62, from 1964-68, and from 1972-76. Mayor pro tem 1972-76; mayor from 1976-80. Former owner of Norberg Travel Service.

These are the six candidates for two, four-year council seats:

• Mike Brown, 40, incumbent. Elected to two terms on Carmel City Council, from 1974-78, and from 1978-82. Ran unsuccessfully for mayor in 1980. Owner of Perspectacles optical shop in Carmel.

• David Maradei, 39. Appointed to the Carmel Forestry Commission in 1981. Station manager of Carmel Post Office. Served as member of ad hoc advisory committee for the Carmel land use plan, 1982.

• Robert Stephenson, 64. Member of the Carmel Planning Commission since 1976; chairman of planning commission since 1979. Serves as member of the Carmel Traffic Committee. Building designer in Carmel.

• Dr. C. Robert Pettit, 40. Carmel physician specializing in ear, nose and throat diseases.

• Larry Little, 33. Part owner of Carmel Sands Lodge.

• Robert Calais, 59. Ran unsuccessfully for Carmel City Council in 1978. Ran unsuccessfully for Monterey Peninsula Airport District Board of Directors in 1980. Driver's license examiner with the California Department of Motor Vehicles.

Carmelite will compete in special Olympics

By MICHAEL GARDNER

TO MOST sports enthusiasts, the word "Olympics" means Los Angeles in 1984, the USA ice hockey team and the Oscar-winning movie "Chariots of Fire."

But for Carla Blackman of Carmel, the word Olympics means the chance to prove that although she is mentally retarded, she can compete athletically and have fun at the same time.

Ms. Blackman is one of hundreds of Monterey Peninsula residents who will compete in the Monterey County Special Olympics Area Games April 17 at Monterey Peninsula College.

Opening ceremonies will be held at 9 a.m. with the games to follow. Admission is free.

This will be Ms. Blackman's third appearance at the games and she has proven herself a gifted athlete each year, walking away with several medals and awards.

"I like it, it's a lot of fun," she said.

Her favorite events are the Frisbee throwing for distance and for accuracy. She also wants to compete in the broad jump, softball throwing and running events.

The 33-year-old Blackman was honored for her skills when she was selected in 1980 to participate in the California State Special Olympics in Los Angeles.

Blackman and her parents, Carle and Wilma Blackman of Carmel, spent a weekend there. She did not come back empty-handed.

Ms. Blackman captured a gold medal in Frisbee throwing for accuracy and a silver for Frisbee throwing for distance.

Blackman's parents are strong supporters of the Special Olympics.

"All of these persons who participate put out a tremendous effort. It's a thrill to watch," said Carla's mother.

IN THE 1981 games at MPC, 250 special athletes participated, traveling from Chualar, Monterey, Salinas, Pacific Grove and Carmel, said George Molano, director of work activities at Gateway Center in Pacific Grove and president of the Monterey County Special Olympics organization.

"Basically, what we're trying to do is give them a chance to compete athletically. It also heightens the opportunity for physical fitness for them. They were not encouraged for athletics because they were thought to be uncoordinated or disinterested. I think Special Olympics proved that wrong," Molano said.

Some of the athletic events that will be held include: Frisbee and softball throwing for accuracy and distance, track and field, swimming and basketbal free throw shooting, he said.

There will also be added events this year, including several different clinics that will be held while the competition is underway.

Clinics and demonstrations planned include gymnastics, tennis, weightlifting and Frisbee, Molano said.

Refreshments will also be available from a BingMobile.

Spectators and participants will also be entertained by: The Blue Grass Monarchs, the Magic Pearl Puppets, a group from the Monterey Musicians Associations called Middle of the Road, a performance group from Rippling River; musician Elizabeth Steege, the El Sausal Marching Band, Jackie Sorenson Aerobic Dancers, the Sahara Dancers and clowns from the Buddy Program.

Some of the volunteer organizations include: Monterey High School Christian Athletes, Kiwanis Club, American Legion and VFW posts, Monterey Jaycees, Fort Ord personnel, Association of Retarded Citizens, MPC Positive Action, Seaside police, MPC, Soledad Correctional Facility, Girl Scouts, and a youth group from the Church of the Wayfarer.

For more information, contact Molano at 372-8002 or 337-1972 after 4 p.m.

CARLA BLACKMAN (center) and her parents, Carle and Wilma Blackman, attended the 1980 California State Special Olympics. Miss Blackman will participate in the Monterey County Special Olympics April 17 at Monterey Peninsula College.

Padre Parents to help Run for Fun(d$)

By MARY POTT

The April meeting of the Carmel High School Padre Parents Board was held at the home of Joline and Bob Fenton. President Wendy Banks opened the meeting and turned the proceedings over to Principal Marsha Kading.

Ms. Kading thanked the board for the successful brunch held recently for three departments of the faculty. She reported on the success of the Sadie Hawkins dance, the visit of the Cal Poly Jazz Band and her meeting with the senior parents to discuss graduation and the eighth grade parents' discussion of high school. The spirit squads for the next year will be enlarged with the help of Deide Kramer, who is the cheerleader sponsor. April will be the month for next year's scheduling, and on April 22 an open house will be held at the school. The Padre Parents board will assist in a hospitality room in the library that night.

Scholarship chairwoman Nancy Sackman reported that the Padre Parents will sponsor a dessert on May 5 to honor all graduating scholars. Graduation Day activities for the 1982 class will include a breakfast followed by graduation practice. Later, after the 4 p.m. ceremonies there will be a Casino Night with dancing and pizza. The following day, the graduates will board buses for Marriot's, a dinner in San Francisco, and a bay cruise.

The Padre board voted to endorse and contribute to partial scholarships for students attending the 1982 Close-Up program in Washington D.C. This nationally attended program allows students valuable insight into American government and how it works. The board will also volunteer to work the concession booth at the races at Laguna Seca. Gail and Pete Salmonsen will co-chair this project which resulted in more than $2,000 for the Padre Parents last year.

Plans were finalized for the third annual Run for Fun(d$) which will be held on April 18. The board enthusiastically agreed to assist the Run for Fun(d$) committee which has been working to continue this community event. Final plans were also made for the final faculty departmental dinner, a T.G.I.F. Buffet, on April 16 at the home of Mary Rose and Johnny Pott.

CVPOA directors meet April 14

DIRECTORS of the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association will consider April 14 whether the organization should take positions for or against development proposed in the Valley.

The CVPOA has been approached by several groups and individuals who plan developments in Carmel Valley seeking its support, or at least for an indication the CVPOA would not oppose their plans.

At its March 10 meeting, the CVPOA Board of Directors appointed a committee to look into whether the group should take positions on projects, and to make a recommendation for the board to consider.

That committee report is to go before the board at 7:30 p.m., April 14 at Los Laureles Lodge in Carmel Valley.

Members of the committee are CVPOA directors Anne McGowan, Jerry Foote, Robert Greenwood, and Richard Dalsemer.

Valley joins the freeway debate

By ROBERT MISKIMON

THE CARMEL Valley Chamber of Commerce may go on record in support of the Hatton Canyon Freeway and against its abandonment by the state Department of Transportation.

Chamber President Dick Krueger said the 185 members of the organization will be polled on the issue within the next two weeks, so the chamber position can be registered with Cal-Trans before June 1.

The state recently notified local governmental agencies that the California Transportation Commission has adopted a resolution of intent to rescind the 26-year-old project and sell the right of way.

Local residents have been asked to give their opinion on retention of the Hatton Canyon Freeway project, widening of Highway 1, or other alternatives to relieve traffic congestion near the mouth of Carmel Valley by June 1.

About 110 persons showed up for a Carmel Valley Chamber of Commerce luncheon meeting April 2 at the Carmel Holiday Inn devoted to the freeway project. Speakers were Henry Case, Cal-Trans district director of programming, and Fifth District Monterey County Supervisor William Peters.

The official position of the chamber will not be announced until after the membership has been polled, but President Dick Krueger strongly hinted what the opinion of members is.

"My guess is that they would favor Hatton Canyon," Krueger said after the luncheon. "I can't conceive of a business person in the Valley not being in favor of an open pathway to the Valley."

Krueger was asked whether the chamber might assume a leadership role in attempting to develop a community consensus for the project, since one reason given by the state for its plan to rescind the freeway was the longstanding controversy about it.

A recent Cal-Trans report indicates funding for the $17 million freeway is 15 to 20 years in the future.

HENRY CASE, Cal-Trans district director of programming, gave the Carmel Valley Chamber of Commerce some history of the 26-year-old Hatton Canyon Freeway project.

"The chamber's in a good position to do that," Kreuger said. "I think it's an appropriate thing for the chamber to do. The message I got from the state is, 'If you want to do something with Hatton Canyon, you'd better do it now.'"

Case outlined some of the history of the project for chamber members.

"We were told in 1958 that if we just didn't improve the road, people wouldn't come here," Case said. "But the daily traffic count has continued to grow through the years."

Case noted that "at the time the (freeway) route was adopted, we had the concurrence of elected officials," but added that support has wavered since.

Although there are methods to minimize the environmental impact of road construction in Hatton Canyon, whatever is built "would be a de facto freeway," Case said.

"My guess is that they would favor Hatton Canyon," Krueger said after the luncheon. "I can't conceive of a business person in the Valley not being in favor of an open pathway to the Valley."

•

'IN HATTON CANYON, we did not come up to freeway standards," Case said.

"We have one design standard we use in urban areas and another we use in mountainous areas. With the urban standard, we have an elevation of 500 feet at Carpenter Street and we'd end up at Carmel Valley Road about 250 feet in the air.

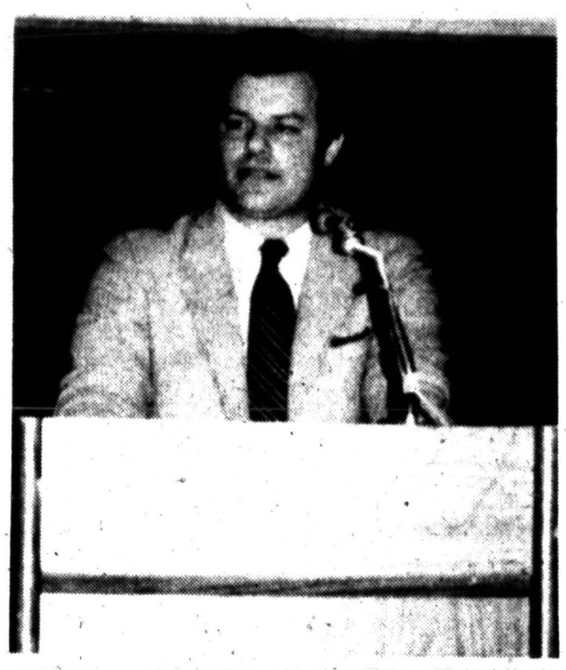
"With the mountain standard, we end up about 20 or 30 feet in the air, and that's ridiculous too. So we designed it following the natural contours and shape of the canyon. That's substantially less than our standard freeway; that's a 40 or 50 m.p.h. road."

Supervisor Peters said he favors the Hatton Canyon Freeway and said "a majority of supervisors are clearly in support" of the project.

The resolution of intent to abandon the project came about, Peters speculated, because "they're $2 to $3 billion in the red in Sacramento and they want to rescind the right-of-way, sell it and make $5 million.

"They shouldn't sell the right-of-way on the assumption some developer can develop that land. The issue here is consensus-building. The community has never spoken with a unified voice.

"Fundamentally, the Valley has not been represented in this debate. This has been basically a one-sided dialogue. It was not until 1980 when there was ever an articulation of a position by Carmel Valley as to what it wanted.



FIFTH DISTRICT Supervisor William Peters of Carmel Valley said it is time for the community to reach a consensus on the $17 million freeway.

"This requires a good deal of public information and political activity. This is an issue which cuts across traditional lines."

Peters said it would be possible to enact a local gas tax to finance the project, if funds aren't available from the state, "but that is extremely difficult and complex to put together."

Such a levy would require a two-thirds vote of local residents and a two-thirds vote of local cities for enactment, Peters said.

The Mid-Valley Merchants Association, which consists of 23 members in the Robinson Canyon-Carmel Valley roads area, has gone on record in support of the Hatton Canyon Freeway, said President Skip Toole.

Council rejects rebates on women's parking fines

65. It is the result of systematic sexual discrimination.

"This (resolution) reflects an economic reality that women are really in an underprivileged status. It is not a gallant gesture; it is based on the same thing as rebates to the elderly."

Councilman Brunn, whose last council meeting was April 6, said he would donate his last paycheck of $150 as a councilman "to process the fairly few who would come forward" to claim their refunds.

City Atty. George Brehmer said the resolution, if adopted, might violate equal protection clauses in state and federal constitutions since "it favors one sex over another." And there is a real question whether the rebates would be illegal use of public funds, Brehmer said.

"Our traffic tickets number 90,000 to 100,000 a year," Brehmer said. "If half of those are women, that's 50,000. That's a considerable administrative burden."

•

COUNCILWOMAN Helen Arnold opposed the resolution because "it degrades the ERA by requesting special privilege for women.

"The council taking a position on this would be redundant, since the ERA has already been passed in California," she said. The Equal Rights Amendment — which has not been ratified by the states — would guarantee women equal pay for equal work.

"Culpability under the law is not determined by sex," Councilwoman Arnold said. "Ninety percent of my calls on this have been from women who said they'd be embarrassed if this law was on the books."

Councilman Mike Brown said he also had received many telephone calls from women opposed to the resolution.

"I have a real difficulty relating traffic tickets with women and the ERA," Brown said. "I don't see the fairness in this if women get a discount for violating the law. You'd have men saying, 'This is great,' and giving their parking tickets to their girlfriends to pay."

Brunn said that ploy could be avoided by a requirement that women send in to city hall a copy of their driver's license when they paid their parking ticket.

"Supposing I gave it to my wife and she took it in?" asked Mayor Barney Laiolo.

"You wouldn't do that, Mr. Mayor," remarked Councilman Frank Lloyd. Lloyd favored the resolution and said its passage "might start a ripple that would do some good."

David Loye of Carmel urged the council to pass the resolution because "you've got women here in Carmel who are increasingly pushed to the wall. There are divorced women and widows trying to hold onto the home place."

"I have a problem with discounting the penalty for breaking the law," said Alan Williams of Carmel. "There will be those who will abuse it."

Councilman Brown said he found it "sad" that some citizens thought the whole exercise was a "joke," judging by chuckles in city hall when the matter was discussed.

Councilmen Brunn and Lloyd favored the resolution; Mayor Laiolo and council members Arnold and Brown voted against it.

Run for Fun(d$)April 18

Conditioned athletes, exuberant grandmothers and even television addicts are invited to jog through the streets of Carmel April 18 to help raise funds for the academic, scholarship and athletic programs at Carmel High School.

The third annual Run for Fun(d$) will feature two races: a 1.1 mile fun run from the school downhill along Ocean Avenue to the beach; and a four-mile foot race from CHS down Ocean Avenue to Scenic Drive, around Carmel Point and back to Carmel Beach.

Registration will begin at 9 a.m. at the high school. The races will start at 10 a.m. The entry fee is $5 for adults and $2 for students. Tee-shirts, which were purchased by a $1,500 grant from the Bank of Carmel, will be available for a $5 donation.

There will be male and female classes and eight age group divisions in the four-mile event. Trophies will be awarded to the top finisher in each division. Each participant will receive a ribbon.

After the races, a potluck barbeque well be held on the beach. Soft drinks and desserts from the booths operated by the school classes may be purchased.

In 1981, the event raised $2,100 for Carmel High School and the funds were divided evenly among the academic, scholarship and athletic programs. There were 361 participants last year.

There was some question earlier this year whether the Run for Fun(d$) would be allowed by the city.

The Business License Code and Review Board rejected a request to hold the event, but that decision was overturned by the city council.

Thomas Jefferson received $2,500 a year as secretary of state.

Steps down from council

Brunn ponders possible county office

By FLORENCE MASON

THERE ARE the Johnnies-come-lately — the new business owners who come to Carmel with little more than a hope and a prayer, and leave with nothing more than experience. And there is Howard Brunn.

Brunn recently opened two shops at The Crossroads and has been in business in Carmel since 1955. He considers his latest enterprises the best, but by no means the last of his business endeavors.

Brunn came to Carmel with his family in 1926. His parents set examples in business and community service that their son has followed in his own life. His father owned a garage on the corner of Ocean and San Carlos in the 1920s and his mother was a member of the school board. Son Howard started on a political trail early: he was president of the student body at both Sunset School and Carmel High School.

When Brunn returned to Carmel after service in World War II as a bomber pilot and an elusive film career in Los Angeles (he had trod the boards at Herbert Heron's Forest Theater at a relatively young age), it was for good.

"I was looking for a regular job," he said. "It came through an on-the-job training program for vets. Earl Glennon hired me in his men's store. It was a starting point too for other now well-known local people, including Bob Little and Peyton Marsh."

His education in retail sales continued when he moved to Robert Kirk Ltd. and became a manager ("I managed myself") and was trained in the company's main store in San Francisco. In the meantime, Brunn was making friends, one of whom was Harrison Godwin, owner of the Pine Inn.

"Each (business) was built onto the last in a sense," Brunn said. "I'm very grateful to have been part of Carmel. There are very few places in the world where this kind of retail history could take place, where you can still enjoy the lifestyle of this Peninsula."

Brunn jumped at an opportunity to take space that became available in the Inn and launched his first of a number of businesses, Howard Brunn's Men's Wear. He bought ties from Talbott Ties and featured them in the front window of the store. He was one of the first to feature natural shoulders in men's shops on the West coast. It was "the traditional New England look," he said.

In a pattern that was to become typical, Howard Brunn started a second store, Mark Fenwick, in partnership with his wife, Courtney, and Hilmi Voskay. Brunn wanted to expand, and bought out Voskay, who went on to start his own Oxbridge shop, another Carmel institution.

In 1965, Brunn sold his men's shop at the Pine Inn to John Grisson and expanded Mark Fenwick, a "traditional New England women's store," into five stores, including Los Gatos and San Mateo locations.

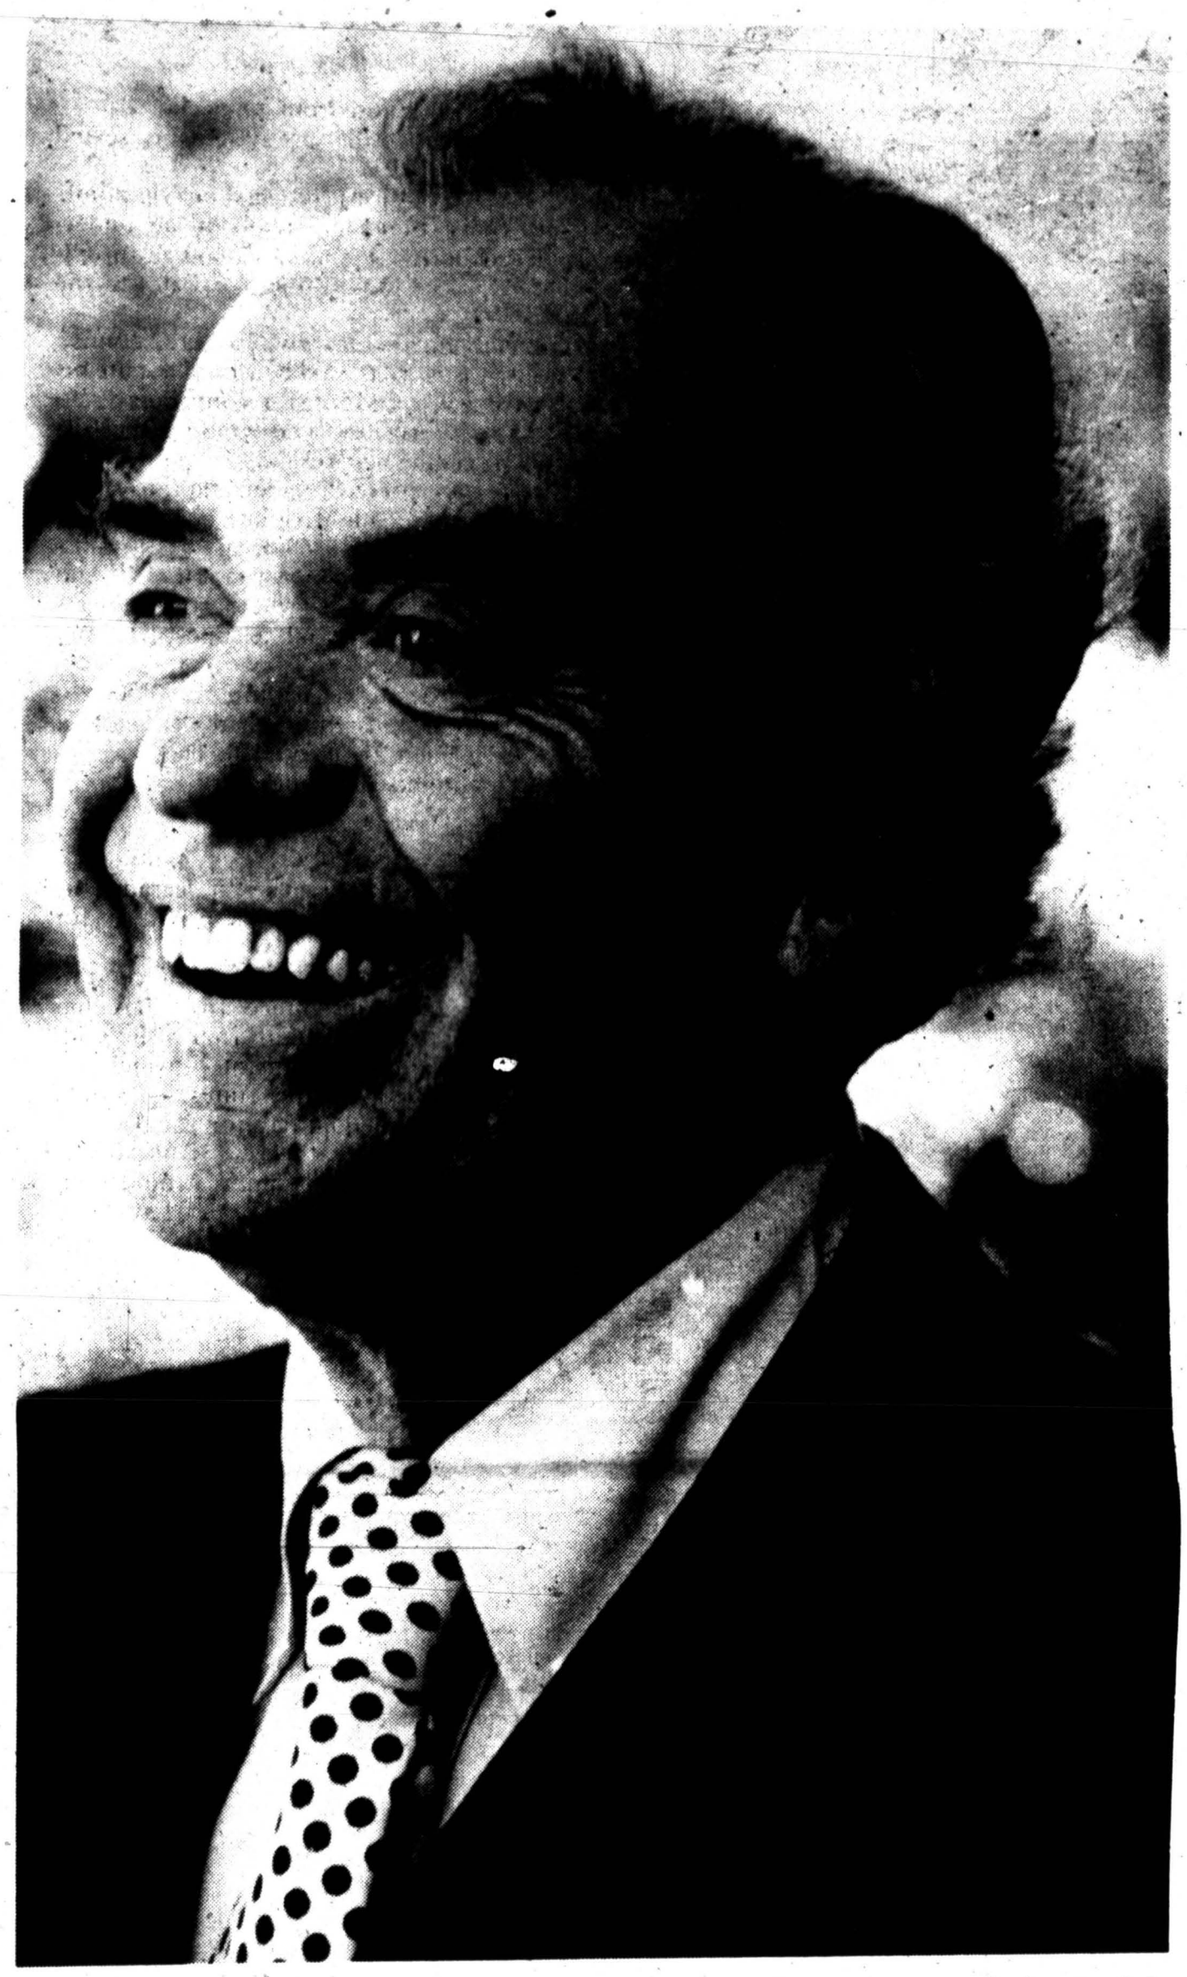
Howard Brunn's Mark Fenwick was one of the first shops in the Carmel Plaza when it opened, just as his two Carmel Mercantile Co. stores are now among the first to open at The Crossroads. In the midst of experience and tradition, he has enjoyed being an adventurer into uncharted fields.

•

THEN IT WAS back to the Pine Inn location for a different sort of venture: The Entrepot Gourmet Shop. The fixtures in his shops have always been important to Brunn and the accessories in the gourmet shop were exceptionally interesting.

Brunn acquired some artifacts from the old Fox Theater in San Francisco when it was remodeled, including a kiosk he placed in the middle of the store and decorated with large brass fire hose holders. In this colorful atmosphere he sold coffees, wine, caviar and a variety of other gourmet items. Then he sold that business (to Donna Hofsas, owner of the Hofsas House) and it became Rittmaster's.

One shop in the Plaza wasn't enough for Brunn so he opened the 1887 shop, a Capezio shoe store. As has been the case with most of his endeavors, that shop is still in the same location, although under different ownership.



AFTER COMPLETION of service on the Carmel City Council at the April 6 meeting, Howard Brunn steps down to devote his time to business. Brunn, however, has not ruled out the possibility he may seek other public office — including that of county supervisor.

At one point Brunn owned and operated three shops — Mark Fenwick, Entrepot and the 1887. Brunn said the most enjoyable part of his business experience was opening Mark Fenwick shops in various locations. He sold the local store 13 years ago, and the man who bought the store is still the owner.

Brunn's idea of a sabbatical from the retail business was to get a real estate license and work in that field for a year. But that was as long as he could stay away from retailing. He accepted the temptation to start a new business: the Carmel Bay Co., at Ocean and Lincoln. His partner was Barney Scollan, who eventually exercised his option to buy out Brunn, and who continues today as the owner.

With all these activities, Brunn found time to keep his twin-engine pilot's license current, serve on the board of directors of the Monterey Jazz Festival and Talbott, Inc. (which will celebrate its 30th anniversary later this year). He was vice president and a founding member of OLAF, the organization dedicated to saving the Odello fields from commercial development, and ran at the top of the slate for Carmel City Council.

A special project which occupied much of his time during the year when he was out of the local business scene was building a home on Junipero. He took the shell of an old house, remodeled and added to it. This was a family project, with his son-in-law, Jay Killen, the designer of the addition and Mrs. Brunn involved in the decorating.

Howard Brunn did a great deal of the manual labor over a seven-month period and said he enjoyed it very much. The house, now for sale, was one of a number that Brunn and his wife refurbished in a period of about five years. They include one on Jacks Peak that was purchased by baseball star Reggie Jackson.

•

"EACH (BUSINESS) was built into the last in a sense," Brunn said. "I'm very grateful to have been part of Carmel. There are very few places in the world where this kind of retail history could take place, where you can still enjoy the lifestyle of this Peninsula."

Brunn believes that each of his stores has been an asset to its location and that he has often set trends. In his first Carmel store he started buying old pieces (Victorian, at that time) and using them as store fixtures. As usual, it was a human interest ("it gave the stores a nice, warm feeling" combined with business know-how ("the fixtures appreciated in value every year").

"I want to remain active in city and county politics" Brunn said. "I enjoy public service." He did not rule out the possibility of running for office again — perhaps at the county level.

Brunn holds that you can often buy an old piece for less than the cost of having it made, if you know the market well. He is putting that belief to work in his two new shops at The Crossroads, one of which is devoted mainly to imported pine furniture — both old and new.

"My hobby has always been business. Everywhere we go, we get to know antique dealers. At first it was all around California — Sangor, the Sierra foothills — then we decided to go directly to England and buy first-hand," Brunn said. What has been the most fun? "Conceptualizing the stores, planning, bringing it all together out of my experience, then opening them.

"Anything over five years in one place is a long time for me. But I don't have any plans for leaving The Crossroads. The only thing that is even in the back of my mind is expansion right there."

•

As he leaves the city council this month, Brunn commented: "I had hoped to be more of a bridge between the resident and the business communities. When business-related problems surface, the best people to solve them are the business people. I was instrumental on two occasions in getting committees together to deal with complex business issues (commercial rent control earlier, now the so-called mini-mart ordinance). Well-meaning residents can't solve business problems by themselves; keeping Carmel a special place commercially is important to both interests."

One of the few things that didn't work out for Brunn was a Santa Rosa branch of his very first store. Another was his unsuccessful bid for mayor in 1980.

"I got caught up in the fun and excitement of campaigning and over-killed with bumper stickers, badges, full-page ads, even teams of young people going about the town. People sent money to me and I spent it. What I found out was that Carmel wasn't ready for such an aggressive approach. I did it that way because the money came and because it is my nature to go after something I want aggressively. If I were campaigning today, I wouldn't do it that way. I would conduct an old-fashioned Carmel 'non-campaign.'"

In case he hasn't enough to do now, the indefatigable Brunn will continue his community interests in at least two directions: the Tor House Foundation and the coming 25th anniversary of the Monterey Jazz Festival.

"I want to remain active in city and county politics," Brunn said. "I enjoy public service." He did not rule out the possibility of running for office again — perhaps at the county level.

But for now, operating his two new stores occupies all the time he can assign to business activities. "I haven't had a day off in six weeks," he said. It didn't sound like a complaint.

Kindergarten readiness program planned at Bay School April 12

A "Kindergarten Readiness" panel discussion will be presented at River School, Fifteenth and Monte Verde, at 7 p.m. Monday, April 12.

The program, which is sponsored by Bay School, is free and open to the public. Refreshments will be served from 7 p.m. to 7:30 p.m. followed by the panel discussion. A question and answer period will be held at 9 p.m.

"We hope to provide a community service in the form of educational discussion for the parents of children about to enter kindergarten," said co-director Wendy Banks.

The panel discussion topics include: "Testing or Screening," Betty Roth; "Readiness," Kay Goines; "Kindergarten Curriculum," Susan Estes; "Starting Too Early," Paula Walling; "Intellectual Development," Lisa Meckel; and "Home Environment," Marcella Perry or Julie Foudy.

School maintenance bill $1.6 million

By ROBERT MISKIMON

THE BILL for necessary maintenance of physical facilities in the Carmel Unified School District has reached $1.6 million.

And to repave worn driveways, replace tattered carpets, patch leaky roofs, and paint faded school buildings, the board of education will have to reach deep into the 1982-83 budget.

When the board of education meets at 7:30 p.m., April 13 at Carmel High School, it will review a report on deferred maintenance projects as part of budget deliberations.

Estimated cost of repairs and rehabilitation to elementary and middle school buildings is $409,482; rehabilitation of deteriorating facilities at Carmel High School will cost another $1.2 million.

Business Manager Robert Zampatti indicated in a report to trustees that the state will pay half of that $409,482 bill for deferred maintenance if the district pays the other half.

The financial squeeze on California school districts has resulted in cutbacks in maintenance of school buildings and grounds," Zampatti's report states.

That means the district may be obliged to use funds from the lease or sale of surplus school property to fund those maintenance projects as part of the $6.6 million budget for fiscal year 1982-83, Zampatti said.

"The financial squeeze on California school districts has resulted in cutbacks in maintenance of school buildings and grounds," Zampatti's report states.

"The state has recognized the plight of districts and acted to establish a program to assist districts in funding maintenance projects which districts have postponed for lack of funds.

"Under the state deferred maintenance program, the state will fund 50 percent of the cost of approved deferred maintenance projects. On Jan. 27, 1982 the state approved projects totalling $409,482.

"A small number of deferred maintenance projects can be funded from the district maintenance budget. Funds from the sale or lease of surplus property could be utilized for the major share of deferred projects."

In addition to those projects, there is the longstanding need for major repairs and rehabilitation of the aging Carmel High School plant. A 1979 architect's estimate of $903,500 for that work has been increased to $1,138,410 because of inflation.

Some of the maintenance work that needs to be done includes a $20,000 project to resurface four tennis courts at Carmel Middle School; $70,860 to hook a septic tank at middle school into sanitary lines; $39,600 to pave roads and the parking lot at middle school; and $87,360 to replace middle school blacktop corridors with concrete.

•

AT TULARCITOS Elementary School, it will cost $10,000 to replace carpeting; $5,803 to pave the upper parking lot; $14,800 to pave the main driveway; and $10,000 to repave two tennis courts.

Captain Cooper School in Big Sur needs a new water tank that will cost $20,000; to seal coat the road at Captain Cooper will cost another $16,000; River School needs a new roof that costs $10,100; Tularcitos School needs roof repairs that will cost another $9,700, Zampatti indicated in his report.

The city of Carmel has contributed $1,700 toward the $12,675 cost of resurfacing tennis courts at Carmel High School, and Friends of the Carmel Unified School District has contributed $2,000.

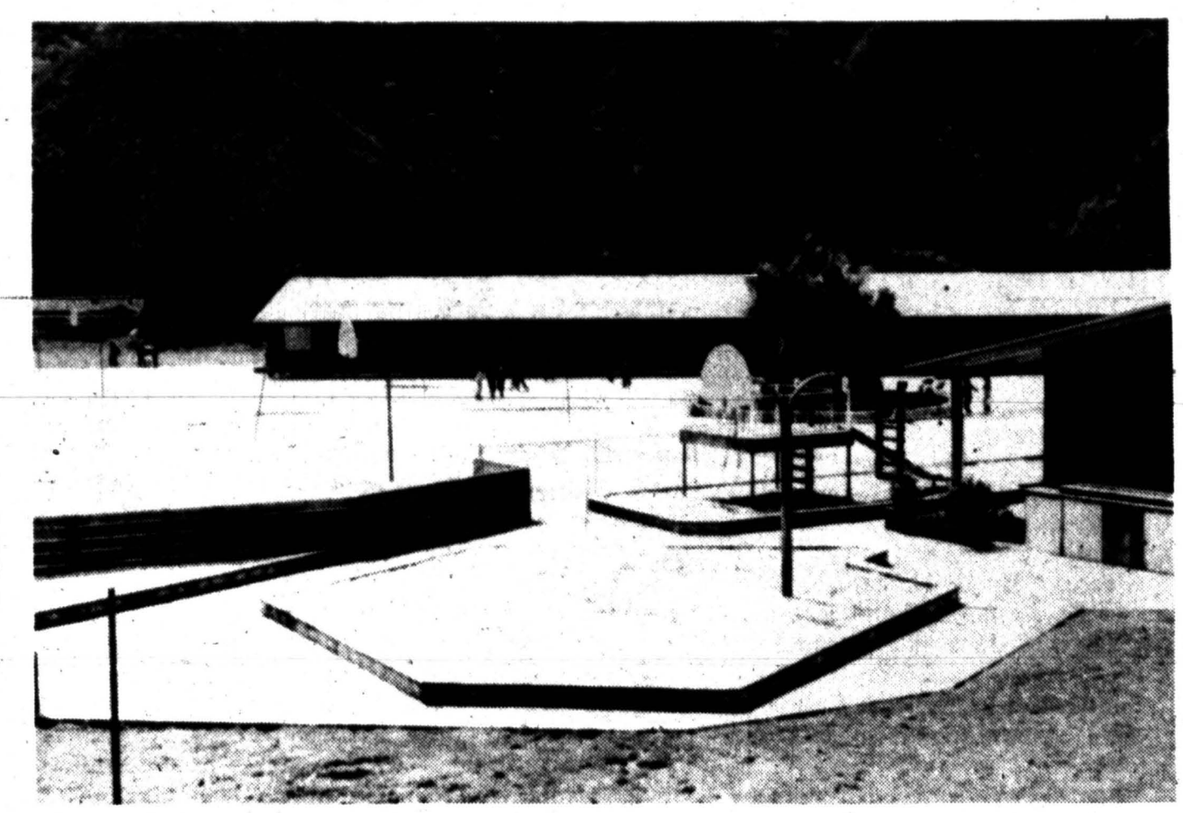
Architect Fred Keeble listed rehabilitation projects needed at Carmel High School in a 1979 report to the board of education. They include rehabilitation of the clock and fire alarm system, upgrading of the electrical system, and addition of exterior lighting; replacement of plaster and deteriorated concrete steps; repainting of the exterior; replacement of carpeting, lighting, drapes, and acoustical ceilings.

"The most pressing of the (high school) rehabilitation projects were included in the district deferred maintenance program," Zampatti indicated in his report to the board.

"Many of the remaining projects may qualify and could be added to the deferred maintenance program at any time. The size of the Carmel High School rehabilitation budget underscores the need to sell or lease surplus property in order to finance deferred maintenance and rehabilitation needs."

When the preliminary 1982-83 budget was presented to trustees March 23, Supt. Bill Rand indicated that a projected deficit of $331,000 would be brought into balance in later versions of the budget.

State funds to school districts and salary increases for employees are other unknown factors in the budget which will help to determine how much money the district has available for deferred maintenance projects.



TULARCITOS SCHOOL in Carmel Valley needs major maintenance, including new paving for tennis courts, driveways and parking lots, new roofs, and new carpeting, as part of the Carmel Unified School District $409,000 price tag for deferred maintenance, plus another $1.2 million for rehabilitation of Carmel High School.

The Carmel Unified School District owns three vacant parcels of land in Carmel Valley with a total area of 40 acres which it hopes to sell as surplus property. These include a 10-acre site on Robinson Canyon Road, a 20-acre site off Scarlett Road, and a 10-acre site on Carmel Valley Road.

The district also is considering whether to sell or lease Carmel Woods and Carmelo elementary schools after they are closed next fall because of declining enrollment.

Equestrian program resumes April 24

The Monterey County Parks Department's on-going equestrian program will resume on April 24 and 25 at 10 a.m. when the department will sponsor a two-day, one-night trail ride along the Nacimiento River. The route, which winds through the back country of Fort Hunter Liggett, is not often seen by most riders.

The fee for the weekend ride is $25 for adults and $12.50 for children under 12 years of age. Riders must bring their own horses. There is a 100-rider limit.

For more information, phone the parks department at 1-424-1971 or 1-805-472-2311.

Sands retires after 33 years in Carmel

By FLORENCE MASON

Another small piece of "old" Carmel is being chipped away through a change in ownership of a local business. Don Sands is retiring after 33 years as a jeweler in "The House That Jack Built" at Dolores and Sixth.

"I'm just going to rest, that's the biggest part of it," Sands said. With a little urging it came out that he will also be "playing golf and marbles and such." The pleasures of retirement, however, will have to await his recovery from cataract surgery scheduled later this month.

Sands originally came from Vallejo. His only other employment was ten years at Mare Island as a pattern maker for the Navy. Earlier, while still in high school, he was an apprentice jeweler and it was to that work he turned when he moved to Carmel. The unusual name of the shop and jewelry repair service came about because the first name of his original partner was Jack and because "this is such a storybook town."

Sands would agree that Carmel has changed a great deal in those 33 years. But, "it is still the nicest town in the world," he said.

The jewelry store's new owner, Agop Agaganian, is no stranger to Carmel. In fact, he will now have two businesses in our town, the first being La Renaissance Jewelry on Dolores between Ocean and Seventh. Agaganian's specialties are custom jewelry designing and manufacturing in platinum and gold, and jewelry repair and appraisals. He doesn't repair watches but harbors the hope that when Don Sands has had time to savor the joys of retirment, he may want to go on with that part of the business at home. Sands wasn't committing himself to that possibility, as yet.

Agaganian is planning some fairly extensive remodeling and will install a bench where he can make and repair small items. He said he would keep the name of the store for the present, but has some concern because it doesn't identify the business as a jewelry shop.

TWO ARE TOO MANY FOR THE SPENCERS

A stationery store on Ocean Avenue that has been in continuous business at that location since 1936 is for sale. Present owners Paul and Mary Kay Allen believe that Spencers Stationery is one of the oldest continuously operating businesses in Carmel.

The Spencers have put the store on the market because their newer shop, Spencers on the Plaza, is keeping them sufficiently busy. Now under a new name — Allen and Co. — it specializes in the retail sale of china, crystal, silver and furniture.

"We wanted to try operating both," Paul Allen said, "but it proved to be too much. Our new store has gone very well; we are particularly pleased that 60 to 70 percent of our business is from local people."

The stationery store, which also carries gifts, office and art supplies, is for sale through Ocean Avenue Realty.

DON SANDS, co-owner of The House That Jack Built, is retiring.

CARMEL REALTOR Priscilla McKeown has started a second business, selling stereo speakers. Can you guess where one is in this photo? It is disguised in the plant.

POTTED SOUND?

You can have it! That is, a stereo speaker encased in a ceramic pot. With plants, too. It's the brainchild of a Riverside inventor and the delight of its local proponent, Phyllis McKeown.

Ms. McKeown is buying the patent to this "revolutionary breakthrough in speaker design" and the distributing rights. For a time, at least, she will work out of an office on Fifth between San Carlos and Dolores which is also home for her real estate activities. She has been associated with IRA (Independent Realtor Associates) since coming here last July from Redding. As we so often hear, she had vacationed in Carmel, always loved it and made the move when the time seemed ripe for a major change in her life. She states clearly now that Carmel is her home: "I plan to stay here forever."

Ms. McKeown, who is divorced, has two children — a daughter in school in San Diego and a son who is in school in Redding, at least until the end of this semester.

The ingenious stereo system looks just like a hanging plant, yet produces 360-degree sound, according to enthusiastic Ms. McKeown. It comes in ten different colors and can be used in any room in the house, or in restaurants, offices and other businesses. The units will be distributed out of San Francisco; the Carmel office will be strictly for processing catalog sales and taking orders by phone.

"Potted Sound" is the name applied to this particular speaker-in-a-pot system. Because she hopes to market other items (a small desk-like unit with transistor radio, for example) her business license is in the more inclusive name "Sound Ideas."

As if real estate and sound ideas weren't enough, Ms. McKeown is also a scuba diver, loves hiking and anything else that can be done out-of-doors.

IT'S APROPOS

She married a Carmel man whom she met when both were in Los Angeles. "He wafted me away from my home in the wilds of Kansas, to Carmel," she said. Once here, Justine Finlen discovered that it was an excellent place to establish a "branch" of her Kansas business: custom uniforms for restaurants and other businesses.

Mrs. Finlen now lives with her husband, Jim, a retired Navy commander, on Garrapata Ridge. She left her Kansas City business, "Apropos," in the hands of an associate and is happily engrossed in contacting already established and about-to-be established restaurants in this area ("so many of them!"). She believes in sitting down with the restaurant owner and coming up with something that reflects the type of food, the ambiance, the degree of formality in each place. "Uniforms don't have to look like uniforms," she said, "unless you want them to. The beauty of it is that you can actually enhance the atmosphere with the right uniform."

Mrs. Finlen works out of offices in the Carmel Valley Village Center Building. Her talents include both design of the uniforms and their manufacture. In Kansas City, in addition to producing uniforms for over 50 Houlihan's and 20 other theme restaurants in the nationwide Gilbert/Robinson chain, her plant is currently in the second phase of production on a 15,000 unit order for Hallmark Cards. In that case, it is employee smocks for all their franchises.

Mrs. Finlen finds the definition of "apropos" just right when it comes to uniforms. "Suited to the time, place, or occasion; pertinent; to the purpose; appropriate."

FROM THE VALLETY TO EUROPE . . . ON A BICYCLE?

Recipient of a considerable amount of information about "a young and energetic new little enterprise gathering steam in Carmel Valley," I find it hard to condense it into an acceptable amount of space in this column. But I'll do my best.

I was immediately intrigued by one sentence in the first paragraph of a letter from Peter Boynton. He said, "Actually, the business is organized and promoted from a Valley address but is carried out 10,000 miles away!"

In fact, it is the clients of Boynton and his partner, Andy Wainright, who are carried away — to tour some of the most beautiful areas of Europe on bicycles! They made a pilot tour last year and two separate tours are being planned for this coming summer.

The first of this summer's cycle tours (June and July) will cover much of the same ground as the pilot tour and will also highlight some of the most popular stops. One such highlight will be extended time at Boynton's family home in the Perigord region of France, not far from Bordeaux. The tour will end "at the clear, cool Mediterranean in a marvelous old port called Collioure, just a stone's throw from Spain." It will last 24 days.

The second trip will be 19 days in August. "We will cater to the robust, athletic sorts among us as we take on the mighty Swiss Alps." However, even then, the partners offer an alternative: the less hardy cyclists can surrender their bikes to the support van and ride to whatever summit beckons, using their bikes again for an exhilarating downhill ride.

Boynton has spent 13 of the past 15 years in Europe, but keeps coming back to the Monterey Peninsula: Big Sur, Monterey and now, Carmel Valley.

On April 22, he will conduct a question-and-answer class associated with the University For Man at MPC. It's called "Planning Your Holiday in Europe" and will include advice on more than one way to do it.

If pedaling the enchanting back roads of Europe excites you, get in touch with Peter Boynton (24 Upper Circle, CV). He'll tell you about other Carmelites who were in that pioneering first group last year.

ONE "COLLECTION"? THREE!

This week's nomination for the busiest people in Carmel/Carmel Valley: Jim, Pat, Christine and Todd Poile. Why? They are opening two shops at The Crossroads (one was off and bustling March 23) and will soon re-open their original shop, The Collection, in Carmel Valley Village.

For the present, all their efforts are directed toward the two new Collections across from each other in that now-lively section of The Crossroads off the main tree-lined boulevard. As Jim Poile said: "We're really excited about being here."

Why two shops? "They are really distinctive. The smaller one, which opened on the 23rd, has gifts, wrought iron items, smaller and less formal art. The larger has a great variety of things . . . more formal, museum-quality art, for example. And both antique and contemporary furnishings." In one or the other store you will find rugs, including Persian and American Indian.

Both stores will be open seven days each week. It is understandable that for a while even the hard-working Poiles (mother Pat, son Jim, Jim's brother Todd and Todd's wife, Christine here, and another brother, Jeffrey, in Egypt) couldn't handle the Valley shop as well. So that is closed temporarily. When it re-opens, it will be stocked with smaller furnishings and gifts. They told me that the "gift" items in any of the three shops will be things I would want for myself. The best kind of gifts.

THIS . . . AND THAT

Two of those busy people at RHT Inc. in the Mid-Valley Center traveled to Burlingame recently to participate in a wine and food festival sponsored by the National Kidney Foundation. Partners Theresa Russo and Lois Toole, who also operates Lois' Catering Kitchen, made the trip.

RHT is the firm that markets food products under the trademark "Fruits of the Valley." Among those products: mint or orange sauterns jelly, tomato marmalade and raspberry white wine vinegar. They're available at Lois' kitchen (Mid-Valley Shopping Center), the Peppercorn in The Barnyard and in Carmel at the Monterey Baking Co. and Nielsen's Market.

The innovative program makes it possible for elderly home owners to sell their homes and then lease them back for lifetime occupancy.

There's still time to buy one of those huge helium-filled balloons for a donation to the Easter Seal Society. The local drive is sponsored by San Francisco Federal Savings and Loan, which also lined up a number of local students to distribute the balloons. A minimum donation of $2 is asked for each, and receipts are available for your income tax records.

The bright balloons, with their Easter seal emblems, will be available through Easter Sunday, primarily at Carmel Plaza and Devendorf Park. In addition, the savings and loan association donated balloons to local businesses to call attention to canisters available in the stores for additional donations.

Coordinating the effort is Charles Storm, regional vice president of San Francisco Federal.

A few more words about Valley Cycle Center, which, as we reported last week, has just moved from the Carmel Center mall to Valley Hills Shopping Center (adjacent to the Wagon Wheel restaurant).

In addition to the center's repair service and bikes for sale (the popular Ross line), it offers bicycle rentals as one of its major activities. The new location makes it especially convenient for the beautiful trails and roads in the Valley. We found out that you can rent a 10-speed, 5-speed or one of the new "cruisers."

There is an argument among historians about the flag flown at the Paradise Mall last week. For certain, it was the flag of one of the Rhode Island regiments, Continental line. But: the first regiment or the second? One reference I consulted insisted that it belonged to the Second Regiment, but the evidence was not convincing.

Be that as it may, I found the white flag, with its anchor, the word "HOPE" inscribed above, and 13 yellow stars on a light blue canton, unusually attractive. I immediately set out to color it properly in my book, "Flags of the American Revolution to Color."

EASTER SEALS will benefit from the volunteer work done by employees of San Francisco Federal Savings, who spent several days selling balloons downtown and at El Rancho Shopping Center. They are (from left) Maria Cromer, Yankee Doodle Dandy, Eric Larsen, David Manning and Colleen Lingenfelter. The balloons were supplied by Creative Balloons of Carmel Valley, which was represented by Yankee Doodle Dandy.

Mayoral candidates give views

THESE ARE the questions which were submitted by the Pine Cone/ Outlook in written form to the six candidates for Carmel City Council and three mayoral candidates in the April 13 election.

1) Should the City of Carmel construct a public parking facility at Sunset Center — or elsewhere — to relieve chronic parking congestion? If you do not favor a parking facility, what other plan would you advance to remedy the parking problem?

2) Should the City of Carmel use public funds to subsidize the rents of residentially-oriented businesses — if necessary because of high rents — to help those businesses remain in Carmel?

3) Do you believe the moratorium against the proliferation of tourist-oriented businesses has been effective in preserving the residential character of Carmel? If not, what other avenues should the city explore to the same end?

4) Should the city continue to spend taxpayer's funds, and staff time, to mount legal challenges to planning and development in Carmel Valley and in the unincorporated area around Carmel which may have an impact upon the city?

5) Do you favor annexation of contiguous, unincorporated areas that surround Carmel so that the city may exercise tighter controls over land use and zoning?

6) Do you think the city council should explore a joint project with the U.S. Postal Service to build a new Carmel post office in conjunction with a public parking facility at Sunset Center, as was proposed several years ago?

7) The city council has been widely criticized for its purchase of the Piccadilly Park at a price of more than $400,000 (or $100 per square foot) when basic human needs, including a youth recreation program and senior citizen housing, remain unaddressed. What percentage of the city budget, in your view, should be allocated to the provision of human services?

8) Do you favor construction of a roadway through Hatton Canyon —either as a freeway or a "parkway" — as an alternative to widening of Highway 1 to accommodate traffic loads?

Laiolo favors annexation; opposes business subsidies

BARNEY LAIOLO

1) PARKING AT SUNSET? The city should definitely consider the use of Sunset North Field for the construction of a public parking facility and possibly an additional use such as housing for senior citizens.

2) PUBLIC FUNDS TO SUBSIDIZE BUSINESSES? I do not feel the city should be involved in the financing business by subsidizing local firms. The city should help by modifying and reducing some of the demands that are set forth in our zoning laws (i.e. re-evaluating parking requirements for new businesses, variations in requirements of R-4 zone, etc.).

3) MORATORIUM AGAINST TOURIST-ORIENTED BUSINESSES? Personally, I don't see that moratorium against proliferation of tourist-oriented business has had any great effect in deterring such businesses. Hopefully the general plan will address this issue.

4) TAXPAYER'S FUND FOR LEGAL CHALLENGES TO DEVELOPMENT OUTSIDE CITY LIMITS? I feel the use of city taxpayers' funds for the so called protection from development in our surrounding areas is unjust. The city has spent approximately $50,000 in fighting the county and what have we gained? Take a look at the mess at the Ranch and The Crossroads.

5) ANNEXATION? I favor annexation if it is first put to to the vote of the citizens of the city. With reference to annexing for the purpose of exercising tighter control on land use, I don't think anyone outside the city would welcome this approach.

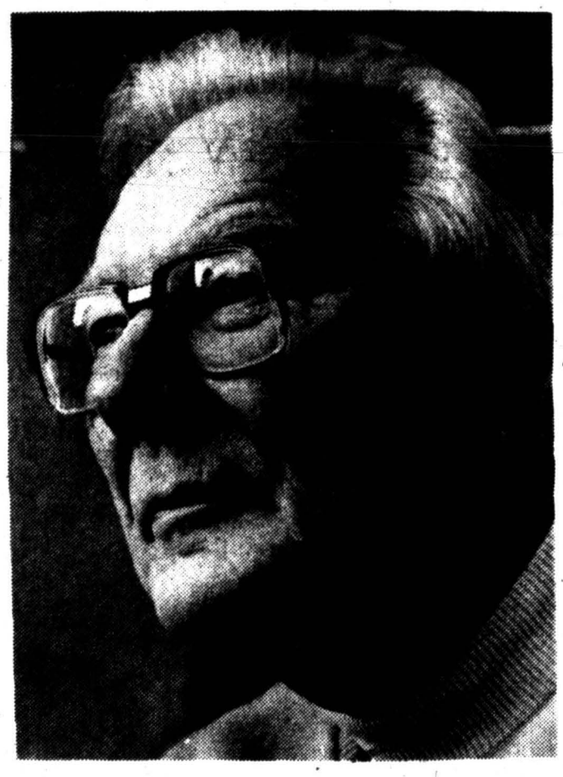
6) POST OFFICE AND PARKING AT SUNSET? I would hope that arrangements can be made to keep the Post Office in its present location. If this does not come to pass I am certain there are other ways of dealing with the problem if it becomes necessary including revising the earlier plans for a joint facility at Sunset.

7) BUDGET ALLOCATION FOR HUMAN SERVICES? The purchase of Piccadilly for $400,000 in my mind is a definite waste of city funds. It must be remembered that it will take another $100,000 to proceed with the present plans to develop this 4,000 square foot parcel of land; and remember, too, the unending cost of maintenance at taxpayers' expense. The use of these monies would have gone a long way toward senior housing. There should be a fair distribution of city funds for recreation for all ages.

It might be advisable, at this time, to reconsider the basis of allocation of hostelry tax monies in order to provide a more equitable distribution of these funds for diversified human services.

8) HATTON CANYON ROADWAY? I feel a parkway through Hatton Canyon would better serve the public. The state owns the land presently allocated to this use. More monies would be needed to buy additional land to widen Highway 1 plus the residents would be living with a widened Highway 1 in their living rooms.

Norberg favors density control in business area



GUNNAR NORBERG

1) It was the original intention that the north playground (now called a parking lot) was to remain in playground use. If the post office at 5th and Dolores would not longer be available and if no other privately owned location were to be available, this post office which is now essentially a "branch" office, could be considered for possible location somewhere on the Sunset Center property, along with some limited parking facility to accommodate post office parking. Sunset Center is essentially a property intended for "Cultural and Community Center" use and any parking there should be basically related to those uses, and not merely to accommodate owners and employees in the business district, or their customers. Motels are required to provide parking for users of their facilities, and gradually this requirement should be extended particularly to those businesses which mainly serve tourists. There exists in the Municipal Code a means — by way of P-3 zoning— through which the Pine Inn and the Cypress Inn have provided special off-street parking for their users — and this same means is available as a possibility for use by other tourist businesses which, long ago, did not have to meet specific off-street parking requirements. The City is presently collecting what are called "in lieu" payments from businesses which do not agree to provide their own off-street parking spaces, but the sums so far collected have not been sufficient to make any meaningful beginning on any significant city-provided off-street parking program. Efforts in years past to set up an assessment district within the business-zoned district to provide wanted business-related off-street parking, have been unsuccessful. Any substantial effort to solve any parking problems which are essentially business-caused, should properly be the main responsibility of businesses specifically benefited by the traffic principally caused by those businesses.

Election '82:

2) Twenty years ago — when I first suggested the use of a perfectly legal density mechanism to halt the mushrooming spread of tourist-oriented businesses, there might still have been available room for residentially-useful businesses at reasonable rents. This simple density mechanism would have said that no restaurant, gift shop, motel, art gallery (or other excessive tourist-oriented business) could be located "within 500 feet of an already existing similar business." This simple density mechanism could, of course, still be tried, and even now it would eventually slow the growth of more-and-more tourist-oriented businesses.

There may be another, and better way to proceed. Through the years it has been noticed that when one side of a street is business-zoned, while the other side of the same street is residentially zoned, the residentially zoned side has a tendency to become less residentially desirable than the streets which are zoned residential on both sides of the street. It could, therefore, be possible, in some such streets where businesses and residences face each other, that the presently residential side could, here and there, be specifically and precisely rezoned only for a specific mix of specifically residential-useful businesses. It might also be necessary to require city monitoring and even city control of rents charged in such specificlly rezoned locations so that the rezoning would exactly serve the purposes for which it would have been created. It is essentially my view that landlords in the business zone should not be allowed carte blanche when that carte blanche deprives the residential community of the necessary minimum of residentially useful businesses. (The recently established R-4 zone is an attempt to make room for residentially useful businesses in a particular corner of the business district, but it probably will not adequately solve the problem to which I am alluding.)

3) It has probably not been in effect long enough, and its prohibitions are probably not restrictive enough, to accomplish the intended purpose, but it is a step in the right direction. The moratorium should be extended and, meanwhile, more specific effort should be given to other and permanent measures to make permanent room for specific resident-useful businesses.

Another long-proposed control mechanism which I have advocated through the years, could be useful in discouraging new motels and some other tourist-type businesses. That control mechanism is to reduce the maximum size of each separate business site from the present allowed 32,000 sq. ft. down to 8,000 sq. ft.

4) Yes, and for rather obvious reasons: To try to keep outsized and incompatible developments from affecting the city. In other words, to keep an outsized and incompatible "tail" from starting to "wag" the

City-business committee is good idea, Townsend says

CHARLOTTE TOWNSEND

1) Present use of this valuable piece of property is unesthetic and inadequate. Various proposals have been put forth. Now is the time to decide which will be of the greatest benefit to our community. We must also decide the fundamental question: who shall pay for this construction and how? The proposed Library Annex-Pine Inn building and parking plan seems an example of an innovative and cooperative concept. Would it perhaps lend itself to expansion? Any additional spaces would be helpful.

2) While this might be a "noble" idea it is frought with perils. How can you be discriminatory in a good sense? Who determines exactly what is a "residentially-oriented" business? Without objective criteria the city runs the risk of legal actions against it. There must be other and better ways of encouraging attractive-to-residents businesses. A city-business committee sounds like a good start. A positive approach is needed. "Let's work together!"

3) It has been effective as a stop-gap measure. It is time for positive approaches and the development of standards which will stand the test of time. The proposed questionnaire/survey of the business community was a good idea which should not be allowed to die.

4) The city has a legitimate interest in elements which impact on it and must take positions, on a case by case basis. A proposed "Area Plan Commission" might be helpful in avoiding problems. We should seek out creative means and emphasize compromise rather than confrontation when approaching these situations.

5) It may be difficult — if not impossible — to keep out contiguous areas if they wish to annex to the city. Therefore "pre-zoning" of such areas is most important. Once again these things must be considered on a case by case basis with attention to costs which may be incurred by the city.

6) It depends! As in so many other questions it is most important to have communication and cooperation among agencies, because when those are lacking it is the citizens who suffer.

7) How can you allocate a fixed percentage of the city budget to something like human needs? Here we must have compassion mixed with common sense, and consider individual needs on their own merits.

8) The city has recently received a review of the Hatton Canyon/Route 1 situation which states "the Hatton Canyon Freeway probably cannot be funded by the state for at least 15 or 20 years." Obviously we have time to consider innovative, flexible solutions, and this should be done.

small but blue-ribboned and world famous "dog" which Carmel has become.

5) Yes.

6) The proposal of several years ago was made before the present main Post Office was built at Carmel Rancho. This action made the existing Post Office at 5th and Dolores in Carmel a "branch" Post Office — and a much smaller postal operation than was contemplated several years ago for a Sunset Center siting.

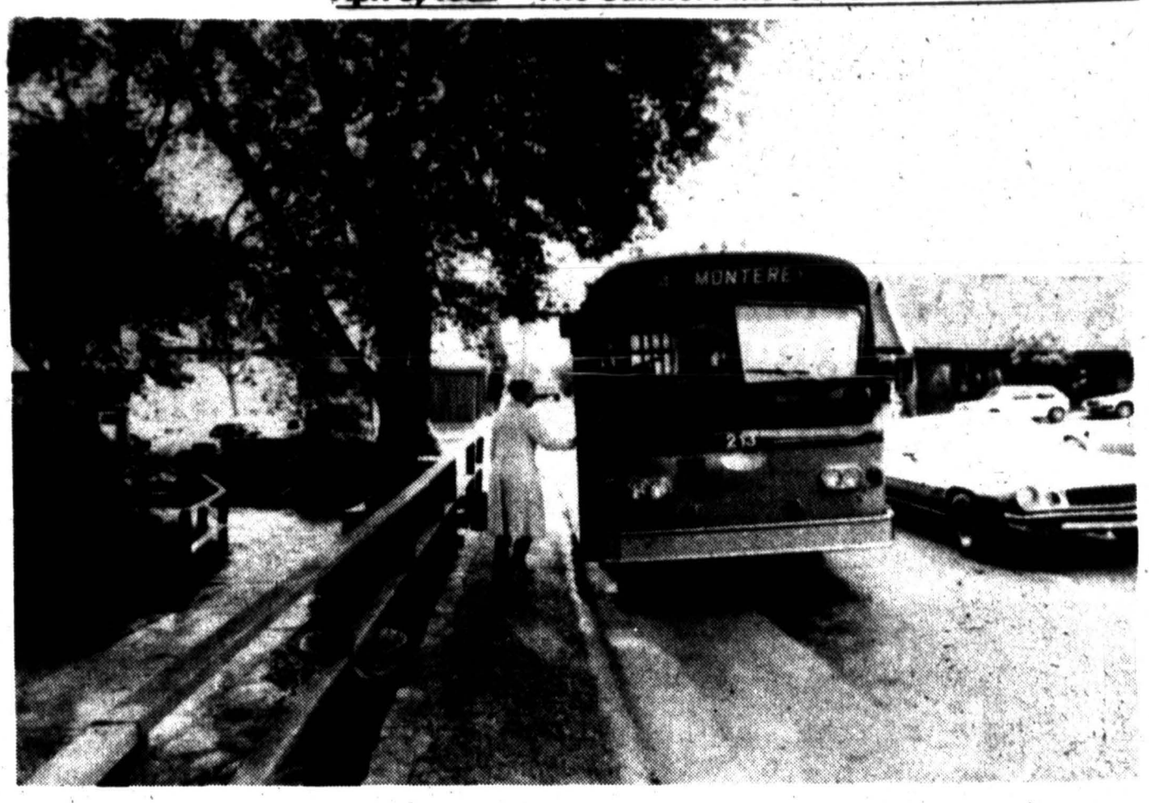
7) I never favored purchase at the high price which was demanded, but the market value of the property is probably somewhere in the neighborhood of $400,000, and there has been an advisory question on the issue of purchase which had been favored by voters. The city has long provided essentially rent-free use of several city-owned lots by the Carmel Youth Center. The city holds title to the Boy Scout House and to the property on which it is situated, and rent-free Boy Scout use of the property is provided. The city also provides rent-free use of a building on the Sunset Center property for the Girl Scouts.

Election '82:

There is also a senior-citizen facility freely available at Forest Hill Park. Near the park are also city-owned tennis courts. Much other senior-citizen activity is provided at Sunset Center where also a gymnasium facility is made available to various age-groups. No doubt there will in the future be other programs both for the young and the old provided by the city. Meanwhile I do not think there should be any specific arbitrary percentage inflexibly established for what is commonly called "human services." Essentially every city service is in some sense, a human service.

8) If any kind of common sense had prevailed in the courthouse in Salinas during the last 40 years or more, there would have been hardly any commercial or residential development at the entrance to the Carmel Valley, right in the floodplain of the Carmel River. Even as late as 1958 there was hardly any significant development east of Highway 1, when much of the area was under water at the time of the April 1958 flood. That flood was, however, only a moderate one as such floods go. The last big flood — called a "100-year" one — probably occurred in 1862 — and it is now already more than 100 years since that one did occur. Such a flood could occur in any coming year, and it could be a monster catastrophe. One of the present results of the dangerous overbuilding which has occurred is the traffic pressure which leads to thinking either about more traffic lanes on present Highway 1, or the use of the wooded Hatton Canyon for what, under present state law, would have to be a 65-mile an hour freeway — with great cuts and fills and enormous interchanges at Carpenter Street and at the Carmel Valley entrance. Easier access to the floodplain of the Carmel River, could mean just more and more overdevelopment, which could — in turn — lead to more pressure for easier and easier roadway access to an area already in potentially enormous flood peril — an area which then, if easier and easier access were created — would only prepare for bigger flood peril.

If any consideration at all were to be given to a possible meandering roadway through the wooded Hatton Canyon, its presently required freeway status must be eliminated — something which the Carmel City Council has repeatedly, and unanimously, requested the State Legislature to do, beginning in 1966, but which the Legislature still has not done. Meanwhile, there is enough width of right-of-way from the Ocean Avenue intersection down to the entrance of the Carmel Valley already available for additional lanes if they were to be desperately required.



Park bus stop may move

BUS RIDERS would have shelter from the elements if a covered bus stop is constructed at Devendorf Park, as proposed by Monterey-Salinas Transit. The Carmel Forestry Commission favors the proposal to build a covered bus stop 30 feet from the southeast corner of 6th and Mission, just down from the present stop. The idea will now go to the city council for review.

Animal Welfare endorses bill to prohibit steel law traps

Animal Welfare Information and Assistance, Inc. of Monterey County has endorsed state legislation to ban the use of steel jaw traps to capture fur-bearing animals.

AB 2600, authored by Assemblyman Sam Farr (D-Carmel), would outlaw the traps, except for farmers and ranchers threatened by predators, by certain government agencies and for use during epidemics of animal-transmitted diseases, said president Gwen May.

Animal humane groups oppose use of the traps on the basis they are cruel and painful and because domestic animals and even humans have been severely injured by the powerful jaws of the traps.

Gwen May pointed out that wild and domestic animals, often left in the traps for days, will chew off a foot or leg to escape.

Animal Welfare Information and Assistance Inc. is also seeking petition signatures to present to the Assembly's Water, Parks and Wildlife Committee which will hear the Farr legislation in April.

More information is available from Animal Welfare Information and Assistance Inc., P.O. Box 942, Carmel Valley, Calif.

WINE TASTING PARTY FOR FRIENDS OF MIIS

What could be more delightful than driving 12 miles down the coast to enjoy Durney wines and Marin French cheeses at Imladris, the beautiful and unusual home of Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Barton?

The affair last Sunday was the annual Spring Wine Tasting Party of Friends of the Monterey Institute of International Studies; about 150 people attended.

Georgia von Richter and Mrs. Turner Croonquist were co-chairmen of the party.

I might add that the weatherman cooperated so the drive down the coast was beautiful as was the magnificent view from every room of the Barton home. A vey nice way to spend a Sunday afternoon!

ELISA AND KENNETH EXCHANGE WEDDING VOWS

No matter how hard some people try they just can't help but shed a few tears at a wedding. Such was the case when Elisa Riddell Andrews and Kenneth Loring Booth exchanged vows in the card room at The Lodge at Pebble Beach last Saturday afternoon.

Both Elisa and Ken are long-time residents of the Peninsula. Even before semi-retiring from the furniture manufacturing business, Ken spent as much time as possible at his Pebble Beach home, where the couple will live.

Elisa and Ken both have children. Those who attended the wedding include Elisa's son and daughter-in-law, Don and Cathy Andrews of Arcata. Elisa's attendant was Mrs. James Neill.

Ken's best man was his son, Kenneth L. Booth, Jr., of Pacific Grove. Two of Ken's other sons who attended were Jackson Booth (wife Connie couldn't make it) of Pebble Beach and James Booth and his wife, Georgia, of Pacific Grove.

Ken's son, John Greenough, who is with the State Department in Nairobi wasn't able to attend, but his two sisters, Mrs. Gray Pearson of Keene, N.H., and Mrs. Chester Kendall of Gardner, Ma., were here for the ceremony.

When asked how they met, Elisa laughed and said that it all happened because they were both involved in community affairs. Elisa was president of The Jesters (the fund-raising group for the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art) for a couple of years and was also chairman of the Festival of Trees, another fund-raiser for the Museum. She is also president of the Eskaton Monterey Hospital Auxiliary, and it was through the activities of these organizations that the two met.

More than 75 friends and relatives attended the ceremony which was performed by the Rev. David Hill. A champagne reception followed in the Library Room.

Elisa regrets that her mother, Mrs. Eleanor Riddell, and her brother, Norman Riddell, both of Santiago, Chile were unable to attend.

The couple have delayed their honeymoon until spring at which time they plan a trip abroad.

Happiness to Elisa and Ken!

STAR GAZING A FLOP BUT SOCIALIZING DELIGHTFUL

The planned entertainment of star and moon gazing was a complete washout thanks to the horrible weather, but the 60 or so guests who recently gathered at the Pebble Beach home of Milton C. Coburn for a reception to benefit the Monterey Institute for Research in Astronomy (MIRA) enjoyed a delightful evening socializing.

Along with good friends and good talk there was plenty of bubbly to go with the delicious hors d'oeuvres prepared by Margaret Omoto. There were lots of oooh's and ahhh's as guests munched into such delicacies as Margaret's special tempura, shrimp canapes and a fascinating mixture wrapped in pita bread. Champagne was donated by Phil Coniglio and the Perrier water by Century Imports of San Francisco.

One very special guest attending the affair was Dr. Bernard Oliver (recently retired vice president for Hewlett-Packard) who donated $200,000 to MIRA, an amount already matched by the organization. Another significant matching grant of $75,000 was given by the Maureen Church Coburn Foundation.

Word is that the organization plans a ground-breaking ceremony at Chews Ridge in Carmel Valley for the MIRA Observatory sometime this summer, hopefully as early as May.

Among the guests attending the affair were Mrs. Taher Obaid, Mr. and Mrs. Leland Dake, Mrs. Lee Early, Executive Director of MIRA Dr. Cynthia Irvine and her husband, Dr. Nelson Irvine, Nancy McCullough, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hennessy, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Stanley, Mrs. Thomas Ayers, Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Bogart, and many, many others including all the MIRA astronomers.

Hostesses for Mr. Coburn were Mrs. Early and Mrs. Obaid.

FIRST MEETING OF BAR BOARD GETS FOLLIES UNDERWAY

Although October seems a lifetime away, it's never too early to get started on a good thing. Such is the thinking of the board members of the Monterey Peninsula Symphony Guild who held their first official meeting on March 30 to work out details for their big upcoming Follies Extravaganza.

The meeting was at the home of Merle and Jane Strauch, who are co-chairmen for the gala, planned Oct. 22 and 23 at Sunset Theater.

ANTHONY'S SHOES IN THE BARNYARD

CARMEL, The Barnyard — Hwy 1 at Rio Rd. (upstairs by the Barnyard Cremery) 625-5628

Some of those enjoying cocktails, hors d'oeuvres and socializing were Betty and Howard Healey, Patty Walker, Ann Simpson, Lucille Huntington, Jean and Cy Filton, Nancy and Bill Fisher, Janny Despard, Claudia Jackson and C.A. "Coots" and Hildegarde Mitchell. Mildegarde, by the way, is president of the Symphony Guild.

The Follies will feature local amateur talent. Along with a female chorus line there will also be a male chorus line and word is that some of our local lads are already lining up to try out.

As mentioned in an earlier column, the group has a contract with Cargill Follies, a company out of New York, who will supply a professional director and costumes.

If you're one of those people who would like to get on stage and "do your thing," but feel that you're not professional enough, think again. The end result will probably have a very polished look but it's strictly amateur and strictly for fun, so check it out.

ZODIAC PARTY FOR ALL GEMINI

The Jesters, fund-raising group for the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art, will use almost any excuse to have a party. That was the reasoning behind their monthly Zodiac Zings, which allows all of those born under "the sign of the month" to enjoy a free birthday bash. Non-birthday guests pay a $1 fee which goes to benefit the museum.

Because of their recent big fund-raiser, The Great Gambol, they're a tad behind with the parties so the Gemini Gig will be held at the Pebble Beach home of Jerry Bernet on Friday, April 16 at 6:30 p.m. Chairman of this party is Polly Kenaston.

The confirmed guest list reads like a Who's Who. In order to separate the birthday people from their spouses or dates I'll put the latter in parenthesis: Maggie Manheim (James), Audrey McCarthy (Mike), Betty Neill (Jim), Jaro Stephan (Barbara), Laurie Stanley, Dee Swedberg (Walter), Herb Towle (Else), Dirk VanderBurch (Carvel), Nancy Whitacre, Helen Spangenberg, Bob Goodfellow (Carmen), Bob Beasley (Lucy), Clare Berlin (Richard), Jerry Bernet, Marie Bonelli, Edith Carr (Charles), Dave Dysart (Pauline), John Fino (Rosemary), Sally Hapgood, James Heisinger (Rosemary), Dale Jackson (Hilda), Donna Kent, Hank Kraus (Dutch) and Ski Menczkowski.

The non-birthday people have to supply the food and the menu includes hearty hors d'oeuvres, hot casseroles, spicy chili, salad and a variety of desserts.

The next gala will fete the Aries!

KATY WALSH IS ATHLETIC TRAINER AT ILLINOIS STATE UNIVERSITY

When Katy Walsh attended Carmel High School she had an interest in sports medicine. That interest stayed with Katy, who is now an athletic trainer at Illinois State University.

An employee of women's athletics at ISU, Katy pulls duty for men's sports also. She has worked extensively with the ISU football and men's basketball teams.

When asked about her job, Katy explains she is the person who "runs from the sidelines with the little black bag to aid an injured football player."

Katy says that a trainer is like a paramedic, trained to deal with emergency medical problems in sports. "The sports trainer must be knowledgeable about the care, prevention and rehabilitation of sports injuries," Katy said.

At age 22, Katy has already earned a master's degree in sports medicine from ISU. While working as a trainer with five sports she completed her graduate curriculum in only two semesters.

Katy earned her undergraduate degree in sports medicine at Oregon State University in Corvallis. She says that ICU is one of only 10 schools in the nation that offers a graduate program in sports medicine.

New FM radio station in Marina will play classical music

A new FM station, KBOQ, began Tuesday morning to broadcast classical music from 6 a.m.-midnight at 92.7 on the FM dial. Transmitter for the new 1000-watt station is in Hidden Hills. Offices and studio are at 223 Reindollar in Marina.

Clint Porter is president of Marina Broadcasters Corp., operators of the station. Program director is Scott MacClelland, music critic and former classical director for KWAV. The latter station switched to an all soft-rock format, leaving the Monterey Bay area without a classical music station. MacClelland said that KWAV donated its entire classical music library to KBOQ.

Roan Cole Corso

The new addition to the James and Paulette Corso family of Carmel Valley is Roan Cole Corso. The baby was born at Community Hospital March 7 at 11 p.m., and weighed 7 pounds, 5 ounces and was 21 inches long. He has reddish hair and dark gray eyes.

Cole was also welcomed by his two older brothers, Colby, 7, and 13-year-old Brek.

Roan's grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Lester Corso of Glenview, Ill., and Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Taylor of Weldon.

Roan's mother, a registered nurse, says the newcomer loves to sleep all day and wail all night. "But he's really a welcome addition to the family," said Mrs. Corso, adding that he is adored by his two older brothers. "They love to pet him but they also love to ignore the baby chores."

Roan's dad owns Business Forms Unlimited in Carmel Valley but he's never too busy to help out at home and that includes cooking, housework and the diaper brigade.

Also helping out are Grandma and Grandpa Taylor who are visiting for a few weeks. Just to make sure there's no lack of held Grandma and Grandpa Corso are planning to visit in another week or so.

Welcome to the world, Roan!

Christopher Robert Foudy

Christopher Robert Foudy isn't very old but he loves to sleep all day and party all night — and dear old dad sleeps right through the commotion, says Christopher's mom.

Master Christopher is the son of Mike and Julie Foudy of Carmel. He was born at Community Hospital on March 4 at 11:17 a.m. He weighed 7 pounds, 13 ounces, was 20.5 inches long and has blond hair and big brown eyes.

The baby was born via Cesarean section but his dad was properly prepared and was right there to give encouragement and take pictures of the newborn.

Also welcoming Christopher is his two and one-half year old brother, Patrick, who enjoys holding the new baby and bragging to his friends that Christopher never cries.

Christopher's dad is an administrator at Hartnell College and his mom is a kindergarten teacher at River School in Carmel. Mom is on a leave of absence until May so when the baby naps she catches up on her writing of educational materials.

The baby's grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Carl Demangate of Menlo Park, Mrs. Ruth Craig of Carmel and Warren Craig of Lafayette. His aunt and uncle, Ann and Richard Foudy, live in Carmel.

Welcome, Christopher!

Philip Steven Wilson

Philip Steven Wilson is a young man who is out to please. His mom, Sally, has worked for the Carmel Pine Cone for the past seven years, and his dad, Steve, for three years. Their job is to deliver the Monterey Peninsula Review to the Carmel, Pacific Grove and Cannery Row areas.

Sally delivered her papers as planned on Thursday and the following day, Friday, Feb. 26, baby Philip made his appearance at Community Hospital. And where was mom the following Thursday? Back delivering her papers, that's where!

Philip arrived at 4 p.m., weighed 8 pounds, 5 ounces and was 22 inches long. He has blue eyes and light brown hair.

The Wilsons have two children each by previous marriages and Sally's two children, Sandy, 13 and Jason, 10, live with them. Steve's sons Ben, 12 and Brian, 11, live with their mother. All the children are delighted with the new arrival and enjoy taking care of him.

Philip's grandparents are Verne Wilson of Sylmar, Eunice Wilson of Monterey and Mrs. Mollie Bundgard of Salinas. Philip was the 15th grandchild for his grandpa, James Bundgard, who died on March 22.

17-MILE DRIVE WAS LONGER

The original 17-Mile Drive, constructed 50 years ago, began and ended at the old Hotel Del Monte, which is now the Naval Postgraduate School in Monterey. Initially the drive encircled the entire Monterey Peninsula, but now it is routed only through the scenic Del Monte Forest.

A call for more culture at Sunset

By MICHAEL GARDNER

A NEW general plan should include provisions to encourage more community and cultural activities at Sunset Center, says the General Plan Advisory Committee.

Once officially finished with its review — probably in August — the committee will forward its proposed general plan recommendations to the planning commission. The city council will make the final decision on the general plan revisions.

Sunset Center was the only public facility discussed at length by the committee when it met April 1. The committee also reviewed a proposed significant buildings element.

Chairwoman Jane Mayer indicated before the meeting that the committee would review the post office situation, but members agreed that it was "premature" to discuss the issue.

If the lease for the post office is not renewed when it expires in January, 1987, the facility will be forced to move from its location on the south side of Fifth between San Carlos and Dolores.

City ordinances restrict new building size to 6,000 sq. ft., but Postmaster Frank Ledesma has indicated a new facility would require between 10,000 and 12,000 sq. ft.

Mayer said she has discussed the issue with one of the property owners, Geroge Gandzjuk, and said he indicated the lease may be renewed.

Members of the committee agreed with Tyler that the general plan should reflect a committment by the city to promote cultural and community activities at Sunset Center.

"It's a red herring that doesn't need to be brought up," said committee member Gene Hammond.

Hammond said that any problems with the lease could probably be worked out before it expires.

Contacted after the meeting, Gandzjuk said: "If the parties involved will compromise and find the medium a renewal of the contract will be possible, which would be in the best interests of the local people."

•

IN A presentation to the committee, Sunset Center Director Richard Tyler said its imperative that the facility "remains the cultural center of the Peninsula."

In a memo to the committee, Tyler said: "The local resident has a particular advantage in living in the center of such apparent vitality. While they may not have the choice of as many programs as in a larger community, there is selection available and usually in any given week — a film, musical presentation, or art show is offered.

"The Community and Cultural Center is the center of activity in Carmel. Shall we define activity? We mean a duplicate bridge game, an art class, a lecture on metaphysics, an exercise class, a discussion on how to stop smoking or to lose weight, a Greek dance class, a filmed lecture on the praying mantis or carnivorous plants and Oscar Winners' Film Festival, a dance festival, the symphony concerts, the chamber music recitals, and many more."

Tyler stressed that Sunset Center is the focal point of activity in Carmel and that the general plan should reflect encouragement of even more programs.

"Tradition is defined as an inherited pattern of thought or action. There is a tradition inherent to the Carmelite. We take it for granted and expect it to be the same for us as it was for those who established and nurtured and worked at it," Tyler wrote. "But it is foolhardy to think that things can remain the same. We can watch over them or lose them, but they do not stay unchanged one way or the other without some action.

"It seems an appropriate time when the general plan of the city is being updated to take into consideration the cultural environment that is a living part of the city."

Members of the committee agreed with Tyler that the general plan should reflect a committment by the city to promote cultural and community activites at Sunset Center.

"I think, for this community to maintain its cultural image Sunset is the vehicle we need to use," said member Alan Williams.

SUNSET CENTER activities usually draw large crowds and Director Richard Tyler feels that provisions in a revised general plan should ensure that the facility "remains the cultural center of the Peninsula."

Tyler said there is room for more activities at Sunset Center and presented some ideas of his on future programs.

"I would like to see the theater so busy with all kinds of activities that people have something to come to all the time — not just three or four nights a week," Tyler said.

He said it is important that the parking problem be solved to increase activities and make current programs more accessible.

A bus service, especially at night, would help many of the senior citizens, who cannot walk far or who are concerned about coming out late at night, he said.

Tyler added that he would like to see a lounge area where senior citizens could meet and hold activities. More crafts programs could be added along with sewing and art classes, he said.

•

THE COMMITTEE also discussed the five-year-old plan to build a two-story multi-use center on the property north of Tenth between San Carlos and Mission.

Committee members said they liked the idea, but that economic realities would probably keep it from being constructed.

"My gut reaction is I'd love to have that facility, but I don't think we can justify it," Williams said.

Member Jean Grace said: "I would love to have it," but added the construction and maintenance costs would be "incredible."

Tyler said it is important that the parking problem be solved to increase activities and make current programs more accessible.

Bob Stephenson, a member of the original committee that explored the idea of a complex, said he had not estimated the cost. "Lots," was his guess of the cost.

"I think it would be great. I would be happy if the city could afford to build it and maintain it," Stephenson said.

The facility included plans for a gym, swimming pool, multi-use room, lockers and shower area, sauna, handball and racquetball courts and a weight room.

A 1977 survey of resident indicated that 337 favored the facility while 304 were opposed.

•

A FEAR of promoting "Hollywood style" tours of famous homes kept the committee from recommending that the city adopt "significant building" criteria for houses.

However, the committee did recommend that the general plan include provisions for "significant building" status for commercial buildings. The criteria would be left up to the council, members indicated.

Hammond said the city would have an "absolute Beverly Hills-tour-the-movie-stars-homes situation" if the city developed a significant buildings list in the residential area.

Gordon Campbell agreed and said tour buses would "invade" the residential area and the tourists would disturb homeowners and possibly damage property.

Williams said the purpose of a significant building status would ensure that a structure could be rebuilt to its present state if damaged.

Many times a structure can not be rebuilt under present zoning laws.

Williams pointed out that most of the homes in Carmel could be rebuilt, and for those that do not conform with the zoning laws, the city has the legal vehicle of variances and use permits.

But in the commerical district most of the older buildings do not conform to zoning laws. Williams said it is important to give those structures significant building status so they could be rebuilt.

Committee members decided that the general plan should include provisions for significant buildings in the commercial district, but not in the residential areas.

Record sewage spill into Carmel River

By MICHAEL GARDNER

A RECORD amount of raw sewage spilled into the Carmel River March 31 and Monterey County Health officials posted warning signs prohibiting swimming and bathing in the beach area at the mouth of the river.

Monterey County Environmental Health Officer Walter Wong esimated that nearly four million gallons of raw sewage spilled into the river from the Carmel Sanitary District treatment plant.

Wong said the area was posted off-limits for swimming and bathing for fear the water could be swallowed and cause an outbreak of typhoid, hepatitis or other intestinal diseases.

Wong said the beach area will remain posted until more tests can be taken after the rain stops.

Carmel Sanitary District Manager Michael Zambory said the spill was the longest on record and it was the most sewage ever dumped into the river.

Zambory said the spill occurred from 11 a.m. until midnight March 31. Sewage also poured into the river off-and-on April 1 and 2.

The spill was blamed on a combination of two factors: power failure and increased runoff generated form the lengthy storm.

The three pumps at the effluent pump station have a combined pumping capacity rate of 4.3 million gallons per day. However, if the electricity goes off, the standby generators can only power two of the pumps, Zambory said.

With the power off for part of March 31, the two pumps were unable to keep up with the storm and sewer flows, he said.

The effluent and storm water filled the holding wet well facility to capacity and spilled out through an eight-inch drain pipe, Zambory said. The pipe carried the overflow into the Carmel River.

Zambory called the March 31 spill "the most on record."

In mid-November, a powerful storm knocked out the electricity for the three pumps and an estimated 630,000 gallons of raw sewage spilled into the river over a two-day period.

The beach was posted for more than a week before the health department determined it was safe to swim and bathe in the area again.

The district is required to report immediately any spills to the health department.

Zambory said the district plans to construct a new pump station as part of the $18.2 million water reclamation project, which will be able to pump at capacity even during power failures.

The district board of directors will receive a full report on the spill when it meets at 1:30 p.m. Thursday, April 15 at City Hall.

Council threatens supervisors with 'definite' library fee

By MICHAEL GARDNER

THE THREATS have become promises in the city-county library budget battle.

If the Monterey County Board of Supervisors refuses to order a new library services study and continue to provide adequate reimbursements, Harrison Memorial Library will charge a fee to non-city resident patrons, the Carmel City Council decided April 6.

In a resolution passed unanimously, the council called for an "impartial" study to determine the feasibility of a regional program where city libraries would be responsible for neighboring county areas.

The resolution will be forwarded to supervisors, who will discuss the library funding issue at their Tuesday, April 13 session. A public hearing is scheduled for 1:30 p.m.

The resolution was the first formal notification that non-city resident patrons would be charged a fee to use the library. Previously, city officials had used the words "maybe" and "possibly" when discussing the possibility of fees.

Carmel Library Director Peg Richter said the resolution is concrete — there are no "maybes."

"It is definite, absolutely definite," she said.

Ms. Richter said the fee would go into effect when the current contract with the county expires June 30.

Ms. Richter said she expects to charge a yearly fee of between $25 and $50, which must be approved by the library board and city council.

The fee would entitle non-city resident patrons to use all of the municipal libraries, she added.

"This is going to be a headache to administer," she said. "It's going to take a lot of staff time."

Richter added that the city used to charge a fee to county patrons in 1971, but offered free cards to students in the Carmel Unified School District system.

"We will not do that this time," she said. "There will be no free cards to school children."

Ms. Richter expressed disappointment that a fee would have to be charged, but said it would be "unfair" to allow county residents to use a library for free that is supported by city taxpayers.

"It's an unfortunate situation. None of the city librarians wants to be put in the position of asking people for money to use the library," she said. "I think the public needs to realize that no public library is free. Public libraries are not free. Someone has to pay for them."

County consultant David Sabsay, in his report to supervisors, claims that county residents in the rural areas are shortchanged because so much money goes to city libraries.

However, Ms. Richter argues that city libraries provide the most services to the most county residents and deserve the additional dollars.

If the consultant's recommendation is adopted, Harrison Memorial Library would lose $130,000 of its county $160,000 reimbursement, Ms. Richter said.

A similar resolution passed by the Monterey City Council April 6 also adopted a get tough stand.

"We're putting the Monterey County Board of Supervisors on notice," said City Mgr. John Dunn. "If they adopt the report, we will adopt a county service fee."

Pacific Grove City Council was also expected to adopt a resolution when it met last night (April 7).

THE ACTIONS by the cities leave the supervisors with few choices: either adopt the report or order a new library service study and continue to reimburse city libraries at the present level.

Monterey County Administrator Richard Andrews and Fifth District Supervisor William Peters were unavailable for comment.

Monterey County Head Librarian Barbara Wynn pointed out that the consultant's report was "very impartial" and "I don't feel the necessity for another study."

Following is a copy of the resolution passed by the Carmel City Council:

"The Sabsay report is not acceptable to the city for many reasons, which include:

"A) The consultant recommends that the county reimburse the city, not on the basis of actual cost, to the city for providing library service to county residents, but on a 2 to 1 rural versus urban funding ratio.

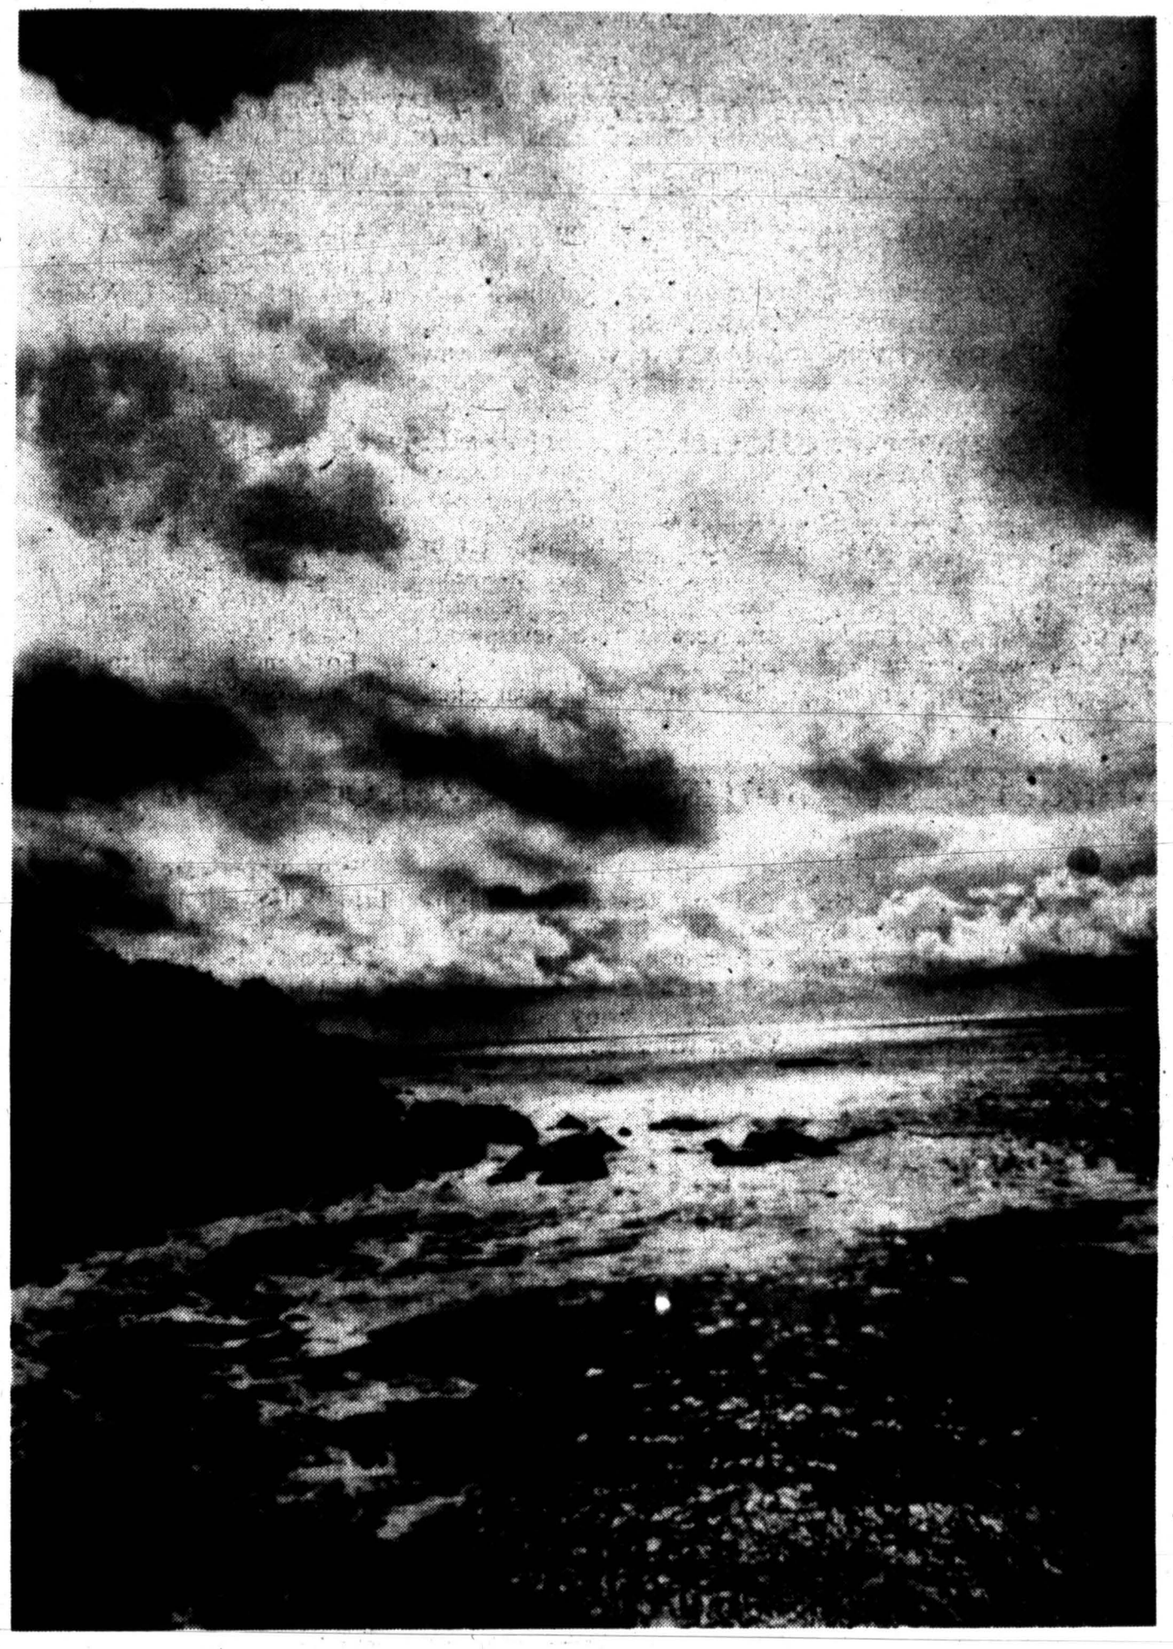
"B) The consultant proposes that public money be spent to build new county library buildings in the Carmel and Salinas areas. These county branches would be less than six miles from established libraries, and would, at great expense duplicate existing library service.

"C) The consultant did not fully examine the possibility of regional library service arrangements.

"The city feels there is a need for a new impartial library study. This study should include exploration of regional and other types of arrangements that would be beneficial to all library users.

"During the period of the study, the city would agree to continue the present contractual agreement with the county, adjusted for inflation.

"If these proposals are not acceptable to the Board of Supervisors, the city of Carmel-by-the-Sea will be forced at the end of the present contractual period, June 30, 1982, to discontinue service to county residents and require payment of a user fee for those who wish to use the facilities of the Harrison Memorial Library."



THROUGHOUT THE storm, the sun teased local residents, poking out every so often to give us a glimmer of hope and then fading quickly behind the dark clouds. (Michael Gardner photos)

EVEN THE normally mild-mannered creek in the park at Ocean and Junipero flaunted its fury from the storm runoff.

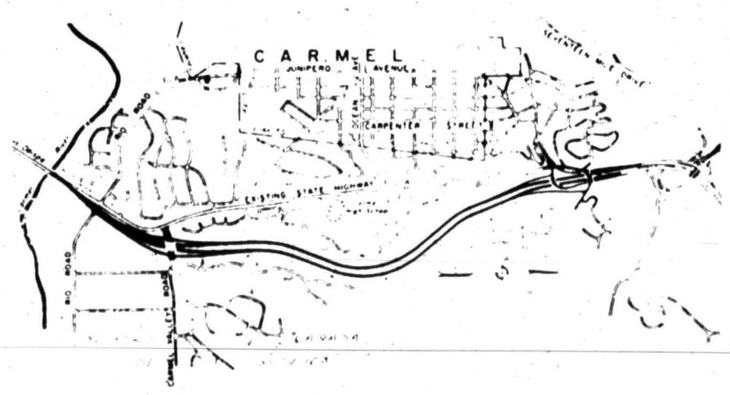
PROPOSAL TO RESCIND ROUTE ADOPTION



PROPOSAL

At its meeting on February 26, 1982, the California Transportation Commission adopted a resolution giving notice of its intention to consider rescinding the "Hatton Canyon" freeway adoption on Route 1 between 0.2-mile south of the Carmel River and 0.4-mile south of the Route 1/68 Separation. In undertaking this review, the Commission hopes to stimulate disc ssion of reasonably attainable options for solving the traffic problems in the Route 1 corridor in the vicinity of Carmel. The financial outlook and overall priorities indicate that the Hatton Canyon Freeway probably cannot be funded by the State for at least 15 or 20 years.

COMMENTS

The Commission is interested in your reaction to all possible options, including: construction of the current freeway plan; staged construction of the freeway plan; rescission of the freeway adoption and disposal of the acquired rights of way; rescission of the "freeway" status and development of a lesser scale facility in the adopted corridor; widening of the existing highway; and other possibilities or combinations of the above as well as the "no project" option.

We would like to receive your initial reactions or comments by June 1, 1982. The Commission has indicated that it will hold a hearing on the matter in the Monterey area sometime in the future. At that time, the Commission would want to receive your direct testimony on the issues of the Route 1 corridor.

Fate of Odello east goes to county planners

THE MONTEREY County Planning Commission is scheduled to hold a public hearing April 14 on whether to exclude the Odello Ranch and other parcels north and south of Carmel from the Carmel Valley Master Plan.

Among those parcels proposed for exclusion by Planning Director Ed De Mars are the High Meadows, Garcia and Mahroom parcels north of Carmel.

The eastern Odello ranch and portions of the Fish, San Carlos and Point Lobos ranches to the south of Carmel are also proposed for exclusion.

The hearing is set for 10:30 a.m., Wednesday, April 14 in the county courthouse in Salinas. The question was referred to the planning commission by the board of supervisors March 29.

Supervisors want a recommendation from the planning commission before they hold another certification hearing on the Carmel Valley Master Plan environmental impact report April 20.

If supervisors then decide they want to exclude those areas, the county would have to obtain permission from the Monterey County Superior Court. Implementation of the 1980 Carmel Valley Master Plan was suspended by court order which resulted from a lawsuit by the city of Carmel.

That action also forced Monterey County to have an environmental impact report prepared on the plan before it is implemented. A moratorium on discretionary building permit is in effect until June, or until the EIR is certified and the plan is amended to reflect environmental concerns.

Although Planning Director Ed De Mars offered different reasons for the proposed exclusion of the various parcels from the Carmel Valley Master Plan area, he assured supervisors that the change wouldn't materially affect land use.

"There is no certainty that the benefits to the landowner will be greater under the existing or future land use plans, the rural character of the lower Valley will be enhanced or the impacts of local development will be lessened by such action, or that the court will modify its order to delete any portion of the area from the current moratorium," De Mars informed the board in a March 29 report.

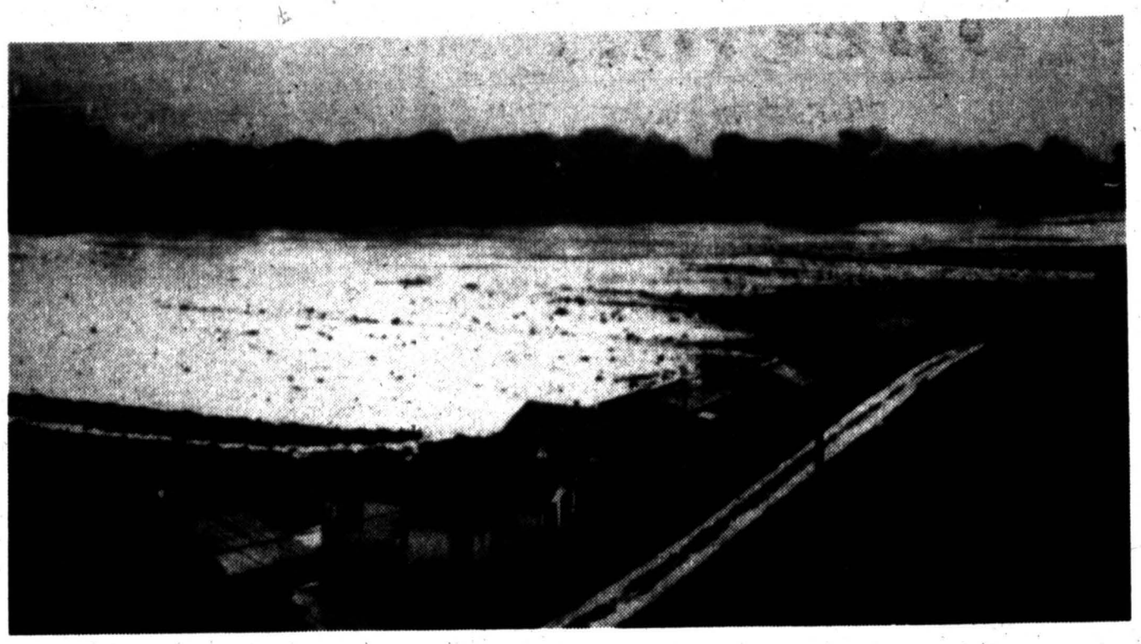
The areas proposed for deletion from the master plan were considered for exclusion in January of 1980, when the plan boundaries were re-drawn in the Carmelite Monastery and Aquajito areas, De Mars noted.

But they were retained in the master plan area "because of their inter-relationship with the Valley in terms of traffic, viewshed, and drainage, among other factors," the planning director said.

•

AN APPLICATION to develop 11 residential units on 72 acres in the High Meadow II area has been suspended by the Carmel Valley Master Plan moratorium.

And the Coastal Commission is scheduled to consider at its May meeting a recommendation from the Monterey County Board of Supervisors that as many as 162 residential units be permitted on the eastern 134 acres of the Odello Ranch when the Carmel area Local Coastal Program is approved.



LAKE ODELLO? Not exactly, but for a time during last week's violent rain storms, you could hardly tell the difference, as storm runoff flooded a large portion of the eastern Odello Ranch south of Carmel. The water was drained into the Carmel River after a clogged drainage pipe was opened. (Robert Miskimon photo).

De Mars recommended exclusion of the High Meadows and other parcels north of Carmel because they are also within the Greater Monterey Peninsula Planning Area under study as part of the county general plan update.

Property owners in the High Meadows—Mahroom—Garcia areas have requested exclusion from the Carmel Valley Master Plan and "in all cases, the intensity of development appears to be in excess of that allowed by the Master Plan," De Mars noted."

If the areas are excluded from the Master Plan, the applicable zoning designations would revert to those indicated in the Monterey Peninsula Area Plan, and "staff has not determined the allowable intensity of development but the potential could well be less than the landowners' expectations."

The land areas south of Carmel, including the Odello property, should be excluded because they are within the jurisdiction of the Coastal Commission, De Mars said.

With respect to the Odello property, "the primary issue is that the bulk of their parcel is within the coastal zone."

'Trigger' devices remain undecided in Master Plan

THE MONTEREY County Board of Supervisors has left the fate of proposed "trigger" mechanisms in the Carmel Valley Master Plan very much up-in-the-air.

During a special hearing on certification of the environmental impact report on the Master Plan, the board did not disagree with a staff report which characterized the devices as too costly and burdensome to implement.

Trigger mechanisms, as proposed by the city of Carmel and the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association, would halt development in Carmel Valley whenever specified levels of air, water noise, and traffic pollution levels were reached.

Sedway-Cooke, the San Francisco consulting firm which prepared the Master Plan EIR, painted a discouraging picture of the feasibility of the proposed trigger mechanisms. The firm called them "untried and possibly unfeasible."

Supervisors continued hearings on the certification of the EIR to April 20. (See related story in this issue).

Alexander Henson, attorney for Carmel who brought the successful lawsuit against Monterey County over the Carmel Valley Master Plan which resulted in preparation of the EIR — disagreed that the devices are unworkable.

"Trigger mechanisms are not that burdensome or costly," Henson told the Pine Cone/Outlook. "If we don't stop development until these problems are alleviated, the residents of the Valley would indeed bear the costs."

Robert Greenwood of the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association told supervisors at the March 26 hearing that the trigger mechanisms ought to be fully explored.

"The consultant has chosen not to consider trigger mechanisms as feasible mitigations, claiming that they would require 'continuous monitoring of all environmental parameters on a sub-area basis.'

"We point out that much of this monitoring is already being provided for, namely air quality monitoring at mid-Valley by the Monterey Bay Air Pollution Control District, groundwater quality monitoring jointly by the county and the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District, and traffic level monitoring by the public works department."

Weather creates problems for pets

By JUDITH A. EISNER

THE EXTRAORDINARY RAINS and the resultant lush greenery are creating pesty problems for dog and cat owners. There has been a great deal of tick activity recently, with many dogs heavily infested with the parasites. All dog and cat owners should make it a point at this time of year to check their pets—preferably once a day—for evidence of tick infestation.

Unlike fleas, which move over the animal's body, biting here and there as they travel, ticks latch onto a host animal with their jaws and feed on the victim's blood. When they are completely gorged with blood, they loosen their hold and drop off the host.

While there are many commercial preparations available that will ultimately kill ticks while they are on the animal, few pet owners will knowingly allow these parasites to remain in place, feeding, until the spray, powder, dip or collar works. They would rather remove the tick and be done with it.

However, tick removal is a little tricky since the tick is hanging on to the animal for dear life. You cannot simply pull the tick off without running the risk of leaving behind its embedded head and jaws—which may fester and cause an infection that requires further treatment.

To remove a tick, you must first make it "let go" of the animal. You do this by saturating the tick in rubbing alcohol (or ether, if available) until it "backs off" and then grab it with a pair of tweezers and dispose of it.

To saturate the tick, thoroughly soak a cotton ball with alcohol, part the animal's hair and apply the cotton directly to the tick. You can squeeze out the excess liquid onto the tick. The alcohol won't hurt the dog or cat, but sufficient quantities will affect the tick.

For the strong of stomach, a very effective method is to grasp the tick and give it a sharp, counter-clockwise twist. Apparently, ticks "screw in" clockwise and can be deftly removed by turning the other way!

Although some people nonchalantly pick up the tick between bare fingers, most people are a bit more reluctant to handle the pests—especially since there is a chance that they may be carrying Rocky Mountain Spotted Fever.

To dispose of the tick, either burn it in an ashtray or be sure to flush it away. Don't simply step on it, as it may survive such treatment.

If you are sure you have gotten the entire tick off the animal—you can check the tick before disposing of it, as well as the place it was fastened—you might just swab over the area with clean alcohol. If there is no sign of infection in a day or two, you can forget that episode.

For identification purposes, common dog ticks are small, reddish-brown insects that resemble dry watermelon seeds with legs. Some bear a small, tan-colored "U" on their backs. If you have not noticed the tick before it engorges, you may not recognize an engorged insect that is still on the host. These monsters look very much like the little balls of chewing gum that children love to make—tan colored and somewhat squishy, with little black legs. The head is invisible since it is buried in the animal's skin.

Severe tick infestation, if not remedied, can severely debilitate an animal. It can cause serious skin disorders, generalized infection, borderline anemia, and, most serious, the previously mentioned Spotted Fever.

Although ticks drop from shrubbery and bushes and most often land on the animal's back and shoulders, they often move up to preferred target areas—the ears and soft hair beneath the ears. Some dogs will come home from a day in the field with ticks clinging to their faces and the area around their eyes.

•

PERHAPS MORE socially acceptable, but no less harmful are common fleas. These little pests can make your pet's life miserable, turn his beautiful coat into a mess and infect him with tapeworm, which uses the flea as a host during one stage of development. (The animal gets tapeworm by swallowing an infected flea while biting at it. The tapeworm larvae then develop inside their new host.)

As fleas hop about on their host, they bite here and there, and each bite itches the dog or cat. In response to the itching, you get biting and scratching which, unless controlled, may injure the skin and make the animal susceptible to secondary infections at the site, as well as to that host of skin diseases known as eczemas.

Aside from the fact that a constantly scratching pet is a nuisance to have around, fleas may infect an entire household. Since the flea jumps on and off the host animal at will, it may jump off at some ponit and lay its eggs in a dark corner of a room where they will hatch into batches of new and hungry little fleas.

The common flea prefers to dine on dog or cat, but should there be no furry friends available, they will condescend to nip at human ankles for a change. Pediatricians are familiar with severely flea-bitten children who seem to get the brunt of the attack since they spend more time on the floor than adults.

Almost all the commercial flea remedies available are effective. There are sprays, powders, dips, collars and tags. Whenever you use one of these preparations for the first time, you should watch the animal closely for an adverse reaction. With flea collars, especially, check the animal's neck every day to make sure no redness, swelling or sores develop.

Because cats have different metabolisms than dogs and are physically smaller, there are some insecticides that they cannot tolerate that are safe for canines. Be sure that a flea or tick preparation bought for use on a cat is intended for cats. These, in turn, may be used on puppies, or small dogs when an adult dog chemical may prove too strong.

Explorama offers look inside Poland

Poland: The Enduring Dream, a film completed shortly before the military takeover of Poland, will be presented by Explorama, the popular travel-adventure series, on Thursday and Friday, April 15-16 at Sunset Theater, Carmel. Sherilyn and Matthew Mentes, a travel-documentary film producing team, will appear in person to narrate their film.

Taking advantage of the pre-military freedom, the filmmakers traveled extensively for three months through the Polish nation. They shot footage in Silesia, Warsaw, Gdanz, Crakow, at the Jagiellon University and on the Baltic Coast.

Poland: The Enduring Dream provides the last uncensored view of life in that troubled country.

Throughout a thousand years of history, the Poles have maintained a sense of unity and patriotism. In the 16th century, Poland was the largest empire in Europe. Then came a period of invasions and partitions and the country was swallowed up by its neighbors, Russia, Prussia and Austria.

For over a hundred years, Poland existed only as a dream in the hearts of the Polish people. Their faith was rewarded after World War I when Poland was again put on the map as an independent nation.

Since then the Poles have been invaded by the Nazis and then by the Russians, but they still endure. Despite overwhelming odds, they have shown a courage and dedication unmatched in the modern world.

Poland: The Enduring Dream presents an introduction to Polish history and takes the armchair traveler on a comprehensive tour including a visit to a bagpipe maker, the Julia Glassworks, Chopin's birthplace, the monastery at Czestochowa, St. Mary's Day services, the Old Market Square, the Wawel Palace, and a special view of Pope John Paul II's visit to the mountains.

The film will screen at 8:15 p.m. Thursday and at 2:30 p.m. and 8:15 p.m. Friday. Tickets are $5.25 and are available at Abinante Music Store, 425 Alvarado, Monterey. For credit card reservations, phone 1-415-771-4733.

A last glimpse...

HISTORIC GDANSK is one of the many cities and sights visited in Poland: The Enduring Dream, a travel film. Film producers Sherilyn and Matthew Mentes will be present to narrate their film which provides the last uncensored view of life in that troubled country. Explorama, the popular travel-adventure series, will screen Poland: The Enduring Dream on Thursday and Friday, April 15 and 16, in Sunset Theater, Carmel.

Richard Pryor Live on the Sunset Strip. With Richard Pryor. Produced and written by Richard Pryor. Directed by Joe Layton. A Columbia release.

If you want to know what really happened in the notorious drug-related explosion that almost cost Richard Pryor his life last year, you can get the whole story straight from the horse's mouth. Pryor's hilarious — and deeply affecting — monologue about the grisly experience is the grand finale of this new concert film, Richard Pryor Live on the Sunset Strip, which was filmed before a live audience last summer at the Hollywood Paladium.

The routine on the hazards of smoking "freebase" ether-laced cocaine begins with some jive wisecracks ("Out of all the millions of people out there freebasing, how come I'm the only one that ever got burnt up?") But it quickly expands into a searing, savagely funny indictment of coke addiction ("If you been doing it for weeks, you're an addict!") that encompasses his experiences at the burn clinic, the unwavering support of his actor friend Jim Brown and a devastating self-portrait as a poor, self-deluding sucker who has a more intense relationship with his pipe than he's ever managed to have with any of his wives (if we're to believe his earlier routine about marriage).

The coke monologue gets funnier as it becomes more terrifying and bizarre, and it illustrates Pryor's comedy at its best. Genuine compassion underscores all of his material, but he never lectures nor permits himself the indulgence of sentimentality. Instead, he offers himself up as the imperfect Everyman — well-meaning but a chronic screw-up — and gets his serious point across with a manic, freewheeling intensity.

Among the other topics Pryor pokes fun at in this crazed, 80-minute performance are relationships ("I am no day at the beach" to live with, he admits), the hardened criminals at the Arizona State Penitentiary where he filmed Stir Crazy, racism, the Mafia and his search for "roots" in Africa. (His impressions of wild animals in the African jungles are hysterical.) Some of these bits work better than others, but Pryor's genius for wicked vocal mimicry and physical clowning keeps us entertained throughout.

The film's major drawback is director Joe Layton's too-often repeated shots of the Palladium audience yukking it up right on cue, the visual equivalent of a TV sitcom laugh track. And anyone intimidated by vigorously raunchy street language might want to pass on the film. Otherwise, Richard Pryor Live on the Sunset Strip is a rollicking look at one of the most resourceful comic performers on the scene today.

What's playing at the movies

An American Werewolf in London: A fascinating and chilling horror story with laughs and thrills. David Naughton is funny and likeable as the American tourist who survives a "wolf" attack on the English moors only to find himself running amok in London at the next full moon. The normality of the young man makes the bizarre things that happen to him all the more terrifying. The special effects of the hero's climactic transformation into a wolf is awesome and won an academy award for technical achievement. Rated R. At the Valley Cinema.

Cat People: Remake of the 1942 Jacques Tourneur cult film. Starring Nastassia Kinski, Malcolm McDowell and John Heard in a surreal erotic fantasy set in New Orleans. Rated R. At the Valley Cinema.

Chariots of Fire: A wealthy Jewish boy becomes a star runner and a Scots missionary sprints for the glory of God. The two men, driven in different ways, lead England to gold medals and glory in the 1924 Olympics in Paris. Beautifully blended color photography. Starring Ben Cross, Ian Charleson, and Alice Krige. Rated PG. At the Golden Bough.

Death Trap: An Edgar Wallace mystery filmed in England in 1960. A girl, played by Barbara Shelly, learns her deceased sister drew some money from the bank before her death, but it seems to have disappeared. Albert Lieven also stars. Rated PG. At the State Three Cinemas.

I Ought To Be In Pictures: Film adopted from the broadway play by Niel Simon, and directed by Herbert Ross. A well-constructed tearjerker and heartwarming comedy set in West Hollywood about the reunion of a father and daughter after 16 years. Diana Manoff plays the daughter, Walter Matthau, the father, and Ann Margret his girl friend. Rated PG. At the Center Cinemas.

McVicar: A slum-turned-hardened criminal John McVicar, played by Roger Daltrey, once known as the "most dangerous man in Britain." The real McVicar (who finally abandoned crime to educate himself and become a scholar and writer on the criminal mind), co-wrote the script, which captures McVicar's life during this transitional period. Rated PG. At the Dream Theater.

On Golden Pond: Katharine Hepburn and Henry Fonda offer a story of a couple still passionately in love after 48 years. Jane Fonda plays their daughter. Rated PG. At the Carmel Village Theatre.

Porky's: A ribald comedy of adolescence in the '50's directed by Bob Clark. The title is derived from the name of a notorious redneck dive to which six teenagers are hypnotically drawn in the belief that they can purchase carnal experience on its premises. A youthful comedy which is a showcase for the six talented actors. Rated R. At the State Three Cinemas.

Quest For Fire: If you loved Chewbacca, you'll go ape over Naoh, Gau and Ika in this film. A story about early man and our beginning. Many strange beasts of prehistoric times such as vicious saber-toothed tigers and Indian elephants. There are some scenes to make you laugh, whether intentional or not. Rated PG. At the Cinema 70.

Resurrection: A tale of a contemporary woman with the miraculous power to heal the sick. Ellen Burstyn gives a warm, funny and intelligent performance as the flesh-and-blood woman who refuses to become a martyred messiah and playwright-turned-actor Sam Shepard is the sexy, reckless young stud who becomes her lover. At the Dream Theatre.

Richard Pryor Live on the Sunset Strip: Pryor is the writer and star of this film, which was shot live at the Hollywood Palladium on two consecutive evenings. With a mixture of wit and warmth, he takes his audience through hilarious accounts of his life, and finally, "Pryor on fire," a re-telling of what led to the accident which nearly cost him his life. Rated R. At the Regency.

Rocky Horror Picture Show: A movie about two teenagers and a transvestite from another planet. Fri. and Sat. midnight show. At the Dream Theatre.

Rock 'n' Roll High School: The story of Riff Randell, who is the number one Ramones fan and rock enthusiast. She attempts to turn her school, Vince Lombardi High, on to the band. At the Dream Theater.

Silent Rage: A Chuck Norris film. Rated R. At the State Three Cinemas.

Some Kind of Hero: Richard Pryor stars in a serious dramatic role as a hard-pressed Vietnam veteran-turned thief. Margot Kidder plays the heart-of-gold prostitute. Rated R. At the Hill Theatre.

Victor Victoria: Romantic comedy set in the 1930's Paris. Julie Andrews stars as a down-on-her-luck singer and James Garner as a tough Chicago nightclub owner, with Robert Preston, Lesley Ann Warren and Alex Karras. Rated PG. At the Dream Theater.

Backgammon

Increase your chance

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

You, White, roll 5-3 in the diagrammed position. How do you play it?

Take the three by moving from Black's 1-point to his 4-point and leave the blot right there. Take the five by coming down from your midpoint to your 8-point.

There's no danger in leaving the blot on Black's 4-point if he doesn't hit it. If he rolls a 6-2 or a 5-1 he will bear one man off and hit the blot. Then you hit back if you roll any four (11 rolls out of a possible 36) or 3-1 (two more rolls). If you stayed on his 1-point and he had to leave a blot on his 4-point, you could hit him only by rolling any three (11 rolls out of 36). You gain two extra chances out of 36 by leaving the blot on his 4-point.

The advantage is bigger if Black rolls 6-5 or 5-4 and must leave blots on his 6-point and 5-point. If you stayed on his 1-point, you would hit a blot with any five, any four, or with 3-2 or 3-1 (24 rolls). But if you have a man on his 4-point when he leaves two blots, you can hit him with any five, four, two or one (32 rolls). You miss only with 6-6, 3-3, or 6-3. The advantage is more than 22 per cent.

Moreover, the advantage may last for several rolls before Black gets his four men safely off the 6-point and the 5-point.

Remember this kind of position whenever your opponent leaves a gap on his home board while bearing off. It's better to leave a blot in the gap than to keep three or more men on his 1-point.

Would you like to have Alfred Sheinwold teach you how to play backgammon? A 12-lesson booklet will be on the way to you when you send 50 cents plus a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Backgammon, (name of your newspaper), P.O. Box 383, Wood-Ridge, N.J. 07075.

"Immaculate...Charmingly decorated...Modest prices... excellent food..."
The Monterey Peninsula Review

Here is what The Review said about us:

"A very long time ago, we used to dine at a small, family-run Scandinavian restaurant in the Scandinavian section of New York. The restaurant was immaculate, charmingly decorated and always busy. The food was not only excellent, but priced so reasonably that one wondered how it could be accomplished, even long, long ago.

"We have just found that little restaurant's counterpart in Carmel. Scandia Restaurant manages to achieve the same level of excellence in cuisine, service and decor, while maintaining such modest prices they seem out of another era.

"No wonder it's been one of the favorite restaurants in Carmel for so many years."

Sunset Views

A tribute to Hollywood heydey

By RICHARD TYLER

THERE ARE three films still to be seen in this year's Oscar Winners' Film Festival which takes place the second Tuesday of each month through June.

This month, April 13, a special film will be viewed, "Grand Hotel," made in 1932. The cast includes Greta Garbo, Joan Crawford, Wallace Beery, Lionel Barrymore, John Barrymore, Jean Hersholt, and Lewis Stone. It received the Academy Award as the best picture of the year.

Call them high drama if you will. For me, these "classier" dramatic films of the 1930s, 1940s, and 1950s and a few later ones are the "movie" movies of Hollywood's heyday, tributes to the time when studio heads held sway and ruled even the stars in their local heavens.

There were stars in those days and they did have faces and they were the stuff that millions of Americans dreamed on, three times a week, whenever the bill at the neighborhood theater changed and offered a new combination of double feature, newsreel, selected shorts, a cartoon, and far from least and most often more exciting than the films to come, Coming Attractions.

The major studios in those post-radio, pre-television times were grinding out more than 400 features a year; that somewhere along the production line a creative milestone was marked or talents blended in an approach to art, or some brave soul ventured toward experiment, was inevitable. And, that these films emerged from the industrial orientation of the studio system that made Hollywood little more than a factory town — albeit the world's most glamorous — is more than a tribute to corporate know-how. It is — and this is unique to the film medium — a tribute to collaborative creativity, to the extraordinary agglomeration of artistic talent that was, in spite of itself, the studio achievement.

In a large part, they reflect the glory days when the "property" was secondary to the stars it would serve, when the stars were showcased in tailored vehicles, when artists and executives joined in an enterprise whose commercial aspects were so coated with stardust that even now we see it through a romatic haze. Moreover, in large part, these films reflect the novelistic and theatrical source of film, the leaning toward the "prestige" of classics as well as the popular appeal of contemporary best sellers in preference to the original screenplay.

But when that original screenplay came along . . . The milestones are many starting with the one and only "Grand Hotel" that established a pattern for gathering stars in hotels, apirports, in the air, on the sea, and even in a chorus line for collective crisis; with "Red Dust," the original macho-male and independent sexpot romance; with "San Francisco," granddaddy of the spectacular-disaster entertainment; and "Gone With the Wind," that unbeatable combination of spectacle, soap opera, and star charisma that is the most durable of popular entertainments.

There is, in so many of these high dramas, a frankness and simplicity of emotion for which the cynical and sordid Sixties and Seventies have left us yearning. These are the films whose likes will not come again. These movie-movies are what movies are all about — the anatomy of the performer and the theater folk only an offer away from Hollywood, in one, and the soul-probe of the transients who strive and succeed and disappear in the ephemera of moving making, in the other.

Which are the masterpieces, the masterworks, and the mere entertainments? Each of us knows — and future generations will all too certainly, tell us. But perhaps more important and relevant about each and every film is its inherent reflections of the society and time in which it was made, its basic record of the past to enrich our present in varying degree, to beguile and, at very least, entertain.

Join us Tuesday, April 13, at 8 p.m., in the Sunset Theater for the Film Series showing of M.G.M.'s GRAND HOTEL, produced by Irving G. Thalbert, directed by Edmund Goulding, and written by Vicki Baum. Tickets at $2 are available at the box office on the night of the performance.

Music Corner

Young musicians are triumphant

By LYN BRONSON

The Chamber Music Society of the Monterey Peninsula presented its Eleventh Annual Ensemble Music Auditions for young musicians residing in California at Sunset Center on Saturday afternoon and followed the event with an awards concert the next day at 3 p.m. at Sunset Center Theatre.

This is always one of the more interesting events of the local music season for a number of reasons. First, you can count on hearing some unfamiliar music. If you come expecting to hear a pleasant rendition of a Mozart string quartet you will be disappointed, for it seems that the auditions increasingly attract unnusual ensembles and unfamiliar music.

The annual audtions have shown a trend of a declining number of string ensembles and an increasing number of wind and brass ensembles. The reason for this seems to be that good string players are in demand. The great majority of chairs in an orchestra are filled by string players since they are the backbone of the orchestra. And, in addition, there are pickup orchestra gigs, dances, weddings, bar mitzvahs and teaching jobs to supplement string players' incomes.

But, suppose you are a woodwind or brass player. In contrast to the 40 to 50 string players, many orchestras get along with two or three of each wind instrument and the first desk player (usually young or in distressingly good health) plays all the solos. There is also less demand in pickup orchestras for wind players. Thus woodwind and brass players seem to be more actively forming their own ensembles in an attempt to find an outlet for their skills.

Often these ensembles represent unusual combinations of instruments for which there is no established body of standard repertoire. For example, one of the groups that auditioned on Saturday was a brass quintet of two trumpets, French horn, tenor trombone and bass trombone. Not surprisingly the selections they played represented arrangements of music written for other instruments or original contemporary music. And this has been the trend, with most groups playing original contemporary music than arrangements.

Contemporary music has dominated these auditions for the past few years. These young musicians all demonstrate one thing in common — real commitment to their instruments and a genuine regard for the music they perform.

They seem to have selected their repertoire because they love playing it, and it sounds good on their instruments, rather than having selected wild, avant garde music just to prove they are doing their duty to support new music.

The inevitable finally happened. At the awards concert on Sunday there was no music of the 17th, 18th or 19th centuries. It was all 20th century music, and a very interesting program at that.

The opening ensemble and winner of the W. Frederick Schaad Award was the President's Quintet from Cal State Fresno, consisting of flutist Ellen Finch, oboist Sarah Moore, clarinetist Tammy Preuss, bassoonist Leslie Torchio and horn player Brian Thompson.

The work they performed, Six Bagatelles for Wind Quintet, by Georgy Ligeti, was delightful from beginning to end. It overflowed with exuberance and pulsated with interesting rhythmic motives. Beautifully written for the instruments, the second Bagatelle Rubato, Lamentoso, made a specially powerful effect with its strong dissonance which imparted a feeling of agony to the movement.

Next, the Florence Allen Award was presented to the Augmented Fourth, a quintet from the University of Southern California in Los Angeles, consisting of oboist Linda Muggeridge, clarinetist Michael Grego, bassoonist Carole McCallum, horn player Ilene Channon and flutist Teresa Mitchell.

This group played the Villa-Lobos Quintette en forme de choros, a work in one movement which exploits the capabilities of the individual instruments. Although an attractive work and well played, there is considerable emptiness in its ostinato patterns and contrived dissonant effects.

The last group on the program, winner of the Chamber Music Society's top award of $1,500, was the Trio Con Brio from Cal Arts in Valencia, consisting of oboist Alvaron Morrow, clarinetist Robert A. Chavez and bassoonist Duncan Massey.

In the Quatre Madrigaux by Martinu and the Trio, Opus 8 by Kirke Mechem, the members of the Trio demonstrated their solid mastery, excellent ensemble balance and thorough sensitivity as chamber music players.

The listener was awared of each musician's ability to draw beautiful sounds from his individual instrument and yet at the same time create a superbly textured ensemble.

It was quite lovely playing throughout. One of the Trio's most impressive qualities was the smooth, effortless way everything always seemed under control. Never was tone forced, and there was some beautiful pianissimo playing.

The Mechem Trio was an interesting work. The first movement betrayed the influence of Stravinsky's Histoire de Soldat, with its jazzy syncopated rhythms. This is a composer totally unknown to me, and I would like to hear some of his other works.

It is always refreshing to hear such dedicated young musicians so full of enthusiasm for the joy of making music.

Judges for the auditions were conductors George Barati and Haymo Taeuber, flutist Frances Blaisdell, clarinetist Rosario Mazzeo and pianist William Corbett-Jones.

CASA VASQUEZ NEAR OLD JAIL

Casa Vasquez, at 546 Dutra St., Monterey, is now the address of the Monterey Park and Recreation Dept. Originally, though, it was the home of Dolores Vasquez, sister of the notorious bandit Tiburcio Vasquez, and by a quirk of fate, situated behind the old jail. Vasquez was familiar with both structures. He often hid out at his sister's house while the sheriff scoured the countryside for him.

Award winning Polish movie screened by Film Society

A documentary about genocide and an award-winning Polish film will be screened by the Monterey Peninsula Film Society this week in the Morse Auditorium, 440 Van Buren, Monterey.

The Peninsula premiere of the stunning new Australian documentary, The Last Tasmanian, will be presented Friday and Saturday, April 9 and 10.

The Last Tasmanian is the story of genocide, the swiftest and most destructive on record. The Tasmanian aborigines were a distinct race, separate and different in many ways from the Australian aborigines. For 12,000 years the Tasmanians had been wholly isolated on their island from the rest of mankind.

In 1803 the British arrived and established a colony. By 1876 the entire Tasmanian race had been systematically and cruelly wiped out. The last full-blood aborigine in Tasmania was Truganini. She saw the genocide take place, all within her lifetime.

This film is a search to discover and comprehend the history and terrible fate of the Tasmanian people. The Chicago Tribune called The Last Tasmanian "a cautionary tale for our times — a vivid slice of history."

The 1957 Polish film, Kanal, directed by Andrzej Wajda, will screen Wednesday, April 14.

Kanal will be screened as a tribute to the director. It is about the Polish resistance movement in the time frame of World War II. Kanal explores the incredible struggles and courage of the Poles as they try to escape the Nazis by descending into the sewers beneath Warsaw.

Films in Review called Kanal "one of the best." The New York Times wrote that the film has an "overpowering visual force...a Dante's Inferno."

Both films will be shown at 8:15 p.m. Admission is $3 general and $2.50 for military, students, seniors and film society members.

For more information, phone 659-4795.

Exhibit of Oriental art will open in Monterey

Flora, Fauna, Frogs, and Fantasies, an exhibit of Oriental art, will open Saturday, April 10 at the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art, 559 Pacific St., Monterey. The show will continue through May 27.

Naturalism in the decorative art of the Far East stems from the religious philosophies. These philosophies teach that "the highest purpose of man is to blend into nature," not to be in constant conflict with the elements as is accepted in the Western world.

Through a wide variety of antiquities and art objects, the exhibit will illustrate the Oriental reverence for nature and its many forms and beings. It will also delve into the Oriental fascination for symbolism which is derived in part from the language.

The all-encompassing show will include graphic arts, screens, paintings, ceramics, bronzes, ivory, wood, gourds, lacquer, enamels and cloissone, textiles, glass, hardstone carvings, jade and horn. The works on display have been selected from the many fine Oriental collections on the Monterey Peninsula. They date from the Shang Dynasty (1200 B.C.) to the Ching Dynasty (1912 A.D.).

The museum is open from 10 a.m.-4 p.m. Tuesday through Friday and from 1-4 p.m. Saturday and Sunday. Admission is free.

One million copies

Bill Dodge's art work is big seller

Carmel artist Bill W. Dodge, owner of the Bill W. Dodge Gallery, has been informed by Libby, McNeill & Libby that his adaption of his original work, Stages of Winter, sold one million copies in a year-end holiday gift promotion.

Dodge adapted a portion of the five-panelled work for Christmas gift-giving trays and holiday gift cards. The sets were sold by the national food company in a series of four color magazine advertisements in People Magazine, Ladies Home Journal, Better Homes and Gardens, Parents, Family Circle, Woman's Day, Sunset and other publications reaching 47 million readers.

Forty thousand additional orders had to be returned to would-be purchasers since Libby published only one million copies of the trays and cards.

"The promotion featuring Mr. Dodge's work was one of the most successful in Libby's over 100 year history of selling food products," said Ian W. Murray, president of the Chicago-based firm owned by the Nestle Corporation of Switzerland. "We recently had a meeting with Bill in February to outline a series of promotions he will do for us from the on-going Americana collection he is doing for us. We look forward to a continuing association with the artist and plan to build the same kind of company-artist association which Norman Rockwell had with the Saturday Evening Post."

Dodge is currently in New York working on two major painting depicting various historical and contemporary aspects of Manhattan. The works will be on display April 22-26 at Art-Expo: NEW YORK at the Coliseum there. The original paintings will subsequently be published as fine art serigraphs and unlimited-edition collector posters.

Dodge will return to Carmel after a tour of several New England states to get new ideas for a series of turn-of-the-centruy paintings he will do for Libby, McNeill & Libby.

CSA 43 seeks new volunteers

Monterey County Service Area 43 Fire Department has begun training volunteers who will augment the paid, professional firefighters at the Rio Road Fire Station.

Budget cuts at Rio Road and Carmel Hill fire stations have reduced the previous on duty staffing from 10 firefighters and three engines, to six firefighters and two engines.

To help offset the reduced staff level a group of 10 volunteers has been established. The volunteers are receiving a two month course which consists of orientation, safety, basic fire suppression techniques and first aid, after which they will be responding to emergency incidents.

Intensified, continuing monthly training in fire control, rescue, emergency medical procedures, and communications, will follow the basic course.

Citizens interested in joining the volunteers when openings occur should contact the Rio Road Fire Station at 624-4511.

Unexpected Elegance

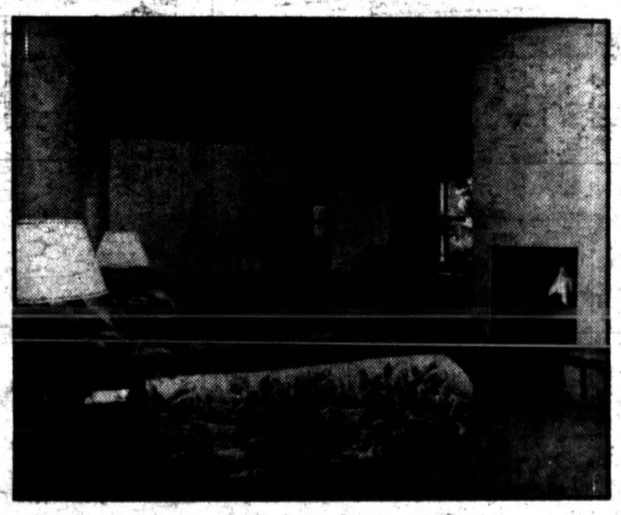
You could drive past this home on Ocean Avenue a dozen times without seeing it. It's just a couple of blocks above Junipero, but so neatly nestled among its trees that it's part of the landscape.

From the driveway and garage the house rises 3 floors, presenting windowed gables to the west and a second level entrance up a sturdy flight of steps. The entry hall is paved in vinyl bricks, and the 21 x 17 living room is just to the right and up two steps.

Two massive beams support its planked ceiling. The gable end is all glass, leading to a comfortable deck. The fireplace is topped by a high black hood and the slate hearth is raised. A marvelous skylight in one corner lights the entire room.

On the other side of the entrance, a corridor leads back past the formal dining room to the kitchen, a charming bedroom and the lower bath. The kitchen is skillfully organized: many light-colored wood cabinets, grey tiled counters, Jenn-air range on the west, double sink on the south, double oven and refrigerator on the north. And around the corner to the east, a compact laundry area.

The stair at the end of the hall leads up to the remarkable 3rd floor and down to the double garage and large storage area. The upper floor includes a long, closet-lined hallway, handsome den with its own private deck, glamorous master bedroom with fireplace, and a spectacular skylighted master bath.



The bedroom here is 19 x 14 with natural beamed ceiling and two great windows that afford views of Carmel Bay and a glimpse of Pt. Lobos. The den is also beamed, and its deck looks across the town to the sea. The bath is wondrously light: 2 sinks, a mirrored wall, separate toilet, large shower with a bench, and a giant walk-in tub.

Binding all these conveniences together is an elevator which starts at the garage level, rises to the main hall, and stops at the den. Altogether this is 2300 sq. ft. of very comfortable living, convenient to town, totally private and completely convenient. Just one year old. $395,000.

ORDINANCE TO LICENSE DOGS IS ADOPTED

From now until May 4, when the dog licensing ordinance goes into effect, there should be a lively sale of dog collars and chloroform in our fair city, and a consequent increase of revenue both for the municipality and the merchant.

This ordinance, as finally passed at last Tuesday night's monthly meeting of the Board of Trustees, stipulates an annual license of $1.50 for male dogs and $2 for female dogs.

WOOD YARD BUSINESS IS TAKEN OVER BY CATLIN

A former attorney, blacksmith and now a dealer in fuel. So reads the career of John Catlin, who is locating his fuel yard next to his blacksmith shop on Junipero and Sixth, formerly occupied by the Carmel Fuel Company.

But at that, it will be the most distinctive woodyard in Carmel. A border of garden flowers will be planted around the yard and paths will be established to allow customers to select their own wood.

FAMILY REUNION

A family reunion was held this week at the Carmel home of Mr. and Mrs. John D. Campbell. Flying their own plane from Guatemala were Senor and Senora Alberto Ruiz along with their children, Melodie and Ablertio. Senora Ruiz is the former Martha Campbell.

During Holy Week Latin American businesses traditionally close for the holidays and Campbell Tropicolor, color processing photography, will stand by until the Ruiz family returns after the reunion.

Another Campbell daughter, Sally, and her husband Richard Gearhart of Novato are also attending the family gathering with their two children, Carolee and David. He is personnel director for Marin County.

The final family member, son Jack Campbell, is here from San Francisco. This marks the first time in seven years that he has seen his sister from Guatemala.

FOUR SAVED FROM FIRE — CATS, THAT IS

It wasn't exactly a cat on a hot tin roof, but four Carmel kittens, stuffed in a dresser drawer, almost went up in smoke last Wednesday afternoon.

Assistant Chief Vern Allred credits the fire department with possibly saving the kittens. Firemen arrived on the scene at Dolores St., south of 8th before a small fire, caused by an electrical malfunction in a plug or wall socket, could spread to the dresser drawer near the wall.

Alison Suter, a renter in a room in the home owned by Helen Dooley, was upset by an estimated $100 in damages, but relieved to find four cool cats when she got home.
